New Labor Peace Appeal Expected From Washington

Roosevelt to Send Message To Federation

New Orleans — (AP) — President Roosevelt is expected to send a message to the American Federation of Labor convention here early next week urging peace between AFL and the rival Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Leaders assembled here in advance of the general meeting, starting Monday, expected the message from the White House to lend new impetus to the drive for conciliation between the two labor groups.

When AFL President William Green makes his annual address Monday he is expected to throw wide the door to any CIO unions which may revolt against the CIO leadership of President John A. Lewis. Green conferred with President Roosevelt a few days ago.

Although leaders would not be quoted directly, many confidently expected several important CIO groups to break away and seek affiliation with the AFL.

Still Dominant Figure
AFL officials said, however, that even if Lewis kept his promise to resign, he probably would continue to dominate CIO in his capacity as head of the United Mine Workers, largest union in the CIO. Lewis' $25,000 a year salary is paid by the mine workers, not the CIO.

The labor men generally expressed satisfaction over the resignation of Nathan Witt as secretary of the national labor relations board, and approved the president's appointment of Dr. H. A. Miller to replace J. Warren Madden on the three-man board.

They looked upon this action as presaging a sweeping change in the board's policies.

Matthew Woll, president of the Union Label Trades department, commenting on Witt's resignation, said at "at least that's getting to the trouble at its source."

Harmony in CIO

Atlantic City, N. J. — (AP) — The threat of a factional split in the national CIO convention next week over partisan politics, labor unity and internal policies began to fade today after CIO leaders John L. Lewis and Sidney Hillman met in a surprise conference apparently to discuss their estrangement.

The meeting that followed a boardwalk greeting was the first in many months and sent reports spreading through convention groups that the two leaders who took opposite sides of the fence in the Roosevelt-Willkie presidential contest had reached the point of burying the hatchet to head off a factional breach on the convention floor.

CIO unionists, who had been expecting a showdown between the Lewis and Hillman partisans, interpreted the conference as a sign that there would be no split in CIO.

Fights Red Elements
Hillman, national defense commissioner for labor relations, was one of CIO's leading third-term supporters of President Roosevelt, and long has been an advocate of new endeavors to heal the breach with the A. F. of L. and to curb the reported influence of Communist party members in high CIO positions.

Lewis, on the other hand, came out in the closing stages of the presidential campaign with a plea to labor to back Republican Wendell L. Willkie, coupling it with an attack on President Roosevelt's administration.

He has also been cool toward peace conferences with the A. F. of L. The meeting of Lewis and Hillman, two of the most influential labor advocates of CIO's five-year-old program of industrial unionism in the mass production industries, was interpreted in well-informed

Kidnap Suspect Critically Shot

Mother Sees Her Son Wounded as He Enters Bound Home

Boston — (AP) — Shot by police before the eyes of his mother, sister and brother as he entered their home, Paul V. Gould, 20, indicted as the kidnaper of a Vermont father and son, lay in critical condition today in a hospital.

The shooting last night came as a climax to an intensive manhunt waged by police, postal inspectors and federal bureau of investigations agents after the kidnaper victim—a rural mail carrier and a 3-year-old boy—were released Thursday night in Boston.

Patrolmen William Quinn and John Smith said they fired in the belief that an object in the youth's hand was a revolver—only to learn later that it was a toy weapon.

Reformatory Parolee
The policemen, stationed in the family's second-floor apartment on the chance that he might appear there, were sitting in the kitchen talking to Mrs. Elsie Gould, the youth's mother, and the brother and sister, when Gould walked in.

A parolee from Concord reformatory, Gould was indicted yesterday on charges of kidnapping, assault with intent to rob a mail carrier and obstructing the United States mail.

Harold O. Flint, 42, South Royalton, Vt., mail carrier, told police that while he was making his rounds Thursday shortly before noon, accompanied by his son, the parolee entered the Flint automobile and forced him at shotgun point to drive approximately 200 miles to Boston.

He said Gould, employed recently as a farm hand in Vermont, robbed him of $42 en route.

Four Deer Hunters Die in Michigan

Detroit — (AP) — Two hunters were shot to death, a third died in camp of a heart attack, and a fourth was killed by an automobile as Michigan opened its deer season yesterday. Thousands of hunters took to the northern woods.

Robert Peterson, 35, of Sagola, in the northern peninsula, was shot accidentally by a companion, Stanley Scholten, 15, Missaukee county, suffered fatal wounds when his rifle discharged as he was removing it from an automobile.

Theodore E. Krauss, 46, WPA administrator for the Bay and Saginaw county area, died in camp. An automobile bearing hunters struck and killed Dick Buning, 40, Missaukee county.

New Premier Assumes Position in Egypt

Cairo, Egypt — (AP) — Hussein Sirry Pasha took over the duties of premier today following his appointment by King Farouk to fill the vacancy caused by the death Thursday of Hassan Sabry Pasha.

Sirry was succeeded as minister of public works and communications by Abdel Dawi Ahmed Bey.

Other cabinet changes were: Hassan Sadek Bey, finance; Abdel Ghalil Abu Samra Bey, social welfare; and Abdel Meguid Aly Ibrahim Bey, supply and communications.

Parachute Flare Does Not Bring Down Goose

Alexandria, La. — (AP) — Hunting geese on nearby Catohoula lake, Lieutenant Colonel E. J. Schmidt of Manitowish, Wis., here for national guard training, carefully aimed and fired. A startled goose took one look at the tiny parachute that daintily floated out alongside and put on speed. Lieutenant Colonel J. Tracy Hale, Jr., of Milwaukee, Schmidt's hunting companion, had slipped a parachute-packed flare shell into the colonel's gun.

2 Turkey Days for Village Divided Between 2 States

Orangeville, Ohio — (AP) — Citizens of this little border village are talking turkey these days.

They have the turkeys, but they don't know when to eat them.

All the fuss came about because part of the village is in Ohio, which observes Thanksgiving Nov. 21, and part in Pennsylvania, which marks the holiday Nov. 28.

Orangeville's population is about 500. One side of Main street is in Ohio's Trumbull county and 264 persons are Buckeyes. The remainder of the people live on the other side of the street and give allegiance to the Quaker State.

Mayor N. R. Williams lives in Ohio and will celebrate Nov. 21, but under protest. He prefers the date.

MAILMAN, SON KIDNAPED—At gunpoint, Harold O. Flint, 42, South Royalton, Vt., R. F. D. mail carrier, was held up and forced to drive his car to Boston, he told police after his captor let him out of his car. Shown with Flint is his 5-year-old son, John, who was with him during the kidnapping and subsequent ride. A suspect, indicted in the kidnapping, was shot and critically injured as he entered the Boston home of his mother.

Fight Over Labor Law May Prolong Session

Washington — (AP) — Demands for action on the Logan-Walter bill and on legislation to revise the Wagner labor act raised new difficulties today for leaders trying to bring about a final adjournment of congress next week.

Advocates of the Logan-Walter measure, designed to facilitate court review of the work of such federal agencies as the securities commission, disclosed they would ask Monday for senate consideration.

The house passed the bill last June. The call for action on labor law revision came from President William Green of the American Federation of Labor. He wrote members of the senate labor committee that by failing to vote on house-approved amendments they were creating the impression of "deliberately attempting" to keep the legislation from the senate.

May Prolong Term
Success of efforts to bring up either of these bills undoubtedly would prolong the session into December. There appeared to be but slender prospects of this, however, at least for the labor legislation, more especially since President Roosevelt's nomination of Dr. Harry A. Miller to a vacancy on the labor board yesterday was expected to result in a shakeup of that agency without congressional action.

Senator Holt (D-W. Va.), an advocate of labor act changes, expressed the opinion that despite Green's move the amendments were "dead for this session." He wrote the A. F. of L. chief, however, that as the first practical step toward pending action Green should demand that congress remain in session.

Faces Sentence on Mail Fraud Charge
Baton Rouge, La. — (AP) — Dr. Clarence A. Lorio, former state senator and Louisiana State university medical director, was convicted of mail fraud by a federal jury last night and faces a maximum fine of $2,000 or five years imprisonment, or both.

Sentence was deferred pending action on an anticipated appeal.

The government indicted Dr. Lorio on four counts, charging he used the mail to defraud Louisiana State university of about $25,000 through overcharges of electrical contract work at the school.

He was acquitted on three of the counts, but convicted on the fourth, which involved the mailing of a bill for $485 by the Scanlon-Norris company of Madison, Wis., to the Evans Electrical supply company at Baton Rouge for an operating room light for the L. S. U. hospital.

Axis Reported Set To Fight in Africa
Rome — (AP) — Premier Mussolini's newspaper Il Popolo d'Italia declared today that Germany and Italy are ready to take military action in France's African territory, particularly in west Africa, to prevent the British from gaining control through De Gaulle's forces.

Mario Appellus, authoritative commentator of the paper, indicated French action would be taken in Africa, and that an axis move would follow if the Vichy government failed to get results.

It was indicated these moves were one of the results of Adolf Hitler's talks with the French chief of state, Marshal Petain, and the vice premier, Pierre Laval.

Appellus declared that France might be "the first victim of Churchill and De Gaulle" unless Marshal Petain showed his authority over the French colonies.

"There is no reason to believe that the Vichy government is preparing to act in this direction in Africa and has had the necessary authorization from the conquerors (Germany and Italy)," Appellus said.

Pupils Threaten to Strike if Patrolman Goes to New Duties
Philadelphia — (AP) — To the pupils of Fell public school "Bill" Logan was more than the patrolman who directed traffic at the school.

He was the "personal friend" of many, knew them by name and was an honorary member of their school council. So when "Bill" was transferred from the post he held for a year more than a thousand children paraded before the school carrying scribbled placards stating that "if Bill don't come back neither will we."

"Bill" got orders today to forget the new assignment and report back to his old job.

500 German Planes in Mass Raid on London

Nazis Deny Much Damage Done to Port

Berlin — (AP) — Nazis threatened England today with another devastating air blow—similar to Thursday night's vengeful raid on Coventry—in retaliation for a British raid on Hamburg.

The high command said a shipyard administration building and a hospital in Hamburg were hit by British bombs last night, but declared damage in the great port was "in no proportion with the number of attacking planes."

A number of persons were reported killed in the bombed hospital and the high command said in its daily communiqué that "a grain silo was fired, but immediately quenched."

Authorized sources, meanwhile, disclosed that Germany, seeking to avoid possible complications, gradually is withdrawing her 8,000 nationals from Italian-occupied Greece, but described the step as purely practical and not political.

Other diplomatic activity centered around Spain and Turkey.

"Retaliatory Attacks"
The high command said "retaliatory attacks" on London continued last night, and hits were scored on traffic points, the Victoria docks and other war essential objectives.

A 16,000-ton merchantman and one of 9,300 tons were reported hit and left "listing" in a bomber attack on a British convoy about 453 miles west of Ireland.

Informed German quarters declared that the raid on Hamburg will be avenged just as "Coventry paid" for the Nov. 8 raid on Munich.

They said Coventry was attacked again last night, but on a smaller scale than Thursday night.

Several hundred planes reportedly unloaded several hundred tons.

Roosevelt Applies U. S. Neutrality Act To Greek-Italian War
Washington — (AP) — President Roosevelt applied the neutrality act to Greece last night, thereby officially recognizing that Greece and Italy are at war.

The effect of the action was to subject supplies destined for Greece to the law's "cash and carry" policy and to prohibit American travel on Greek ships. Since the Mediterranean already is a part of the European combat zone which American ships may not enter, no extension of the zone was necessary in connection with this application of the act.

Britain Orders More Men to Register
London — (AP) — Britain called the second half of the 35-year-age group to register today for military service. The order applied to men born between Jan. 1 and June 30, 1905. Men born the last half of the year registered Nov. 9.

Beaverbrook Studies Damage at Coventry
London — (AP) — Disclosure today that Lord Beaverbrook, minister for aircraft production, spent all day yesterday inspecting raid-wrecked Coventry was taken today by some observers as an indication of the importance the government attaches to that factory city's part in Britain's war effort.

The British Press association reported yesterday that the raiders "failed lamentably" to do extensive damage to military objectives in the attack in which more than 1,000 persons were killed and injured.

The Orinoco carried a crew of 200, the other vessels 40 men each. The four ships had been moored here since the outbreak of the European war.

"As the tugboat Sabala was getting up steam to go to assistance of the burning ship, the Orinoco signalled her machinery trouble. The Sabala then took the Orinoco in tow."

The ships obtained clearance papers late yesterday, three of them giving the Canary islands as their destination and the fourth, Vigo, Spain.

Shipping circles speculated that they might be planning to keep a rendezvous with a German war vessel.

Reports of German surface warships operating in Caribbean waters have been prevalent for some time.

(Shipping circles in New York heard unconfirmed reports last night that the 2,295-ton German freighter Helgoland, which shipped out of Barranquilla, Colombia, had been sunk by a British warship in the Caribbean.)

Greeks Pushing Attack on Italians

Athens — (AP) — Some of the heaviest fighting of the Greek-Italian war was reported developing today with Greek attack columns smashing into the Italian army westward from big Prespa lake and down the Boutsura river valley toward the Albanian port of Salonika.

Reliable sources said the Greeks threatened to cut the Italian forces in Albania into three parts and encircle thousands of fascists.

So hard-pressed were the Italians that they were reported to have withdrawn their forces along the Yugoslav frontier. (Six words censored.)

Military experts said this withdrawal, combined with the Greek offensive from the region of Lake Prespa and Koritza, in the southeastern corner of Albania, was destroying any plan the Italians may have had of using a route across southern Yugoslavia toward the Greek port of Salonika.

Capture 700 Italians
Greek army men claimed the capture of 700 fascist soldiers and 10 heavy guns. (57 words censored.)

The Italians were reported to be having difficulty mustering sufficient troops to meet the flank attack from Lake Prespa as they were harassed heavily by a third Greek force driving straight up the Ionian coast from the islands to the south.

(Presumably this drive also was aimed at Porto Edda and Valona, thus threatening the Italians with a pinchers movement.)

The Athens newspaper Elektor Zima said the Greek fleet was bombarding the Italians behind their lines and that the land drive had been launched along the Albanian frontier from the sea.

The Greeks, it said, are "continuously improving their positions and increasingly menacing important points in the Italian defense and enemy communications, despite the strong positions of the Italians and the superiority of their men and armament."

In the northern sector, the newspaper said, the attacks were carried out from between the lakes of Ochris and Prespa to the Morova mountains and southeast to the Grammos mountains.

Reports from the south indicated British air attacks on Italian bases in the Dodecanese islands, off the Turkish coast, were increasing in violence.

Travelers from Turkey said many of the islands already were suffering from lack of food and munitions as a result of the British sea blockade, which has been tightened by occupation of Crete, and enables the British to extend their lines from Greece to Egypt.

Heil Proclaims Thanksgiving Day
Sets It for Next Thursday to Avoid 'Double Holiday'

Madison — (AP) — Governor Heil today formally proclaimed Thursday, Nov. 21, as Thanksgiving day. This coincides with the date that President Roosevelt announced he would designate in a national proclamation. It is a week ahead of the traditional "last Thursday in November."

The governor's proclamation said: "Amidst the horrors of war abroad and the suffering of untold millions of men, women and children in other lands, America has much for which to be thankful."

"We thank almighty God that we are at peace. We are grateful for a fine harvest. We cherish the fact that we are a free people, and that the blessings of liberty and opportunity are still ours."

Would Avoid Confusion
"Because of the peculiar wording of Wisconsin law, Thanksgiving day is a holiday in the commonwealth on the day designated by the president and upon the day set forth by the governor."

"Though fully conscious of the tradition that the last Thursday in November be set apart yet to avoid the confusion of a double holiday, I, Julius P. Heil, governor of Wisconsin, by virtue of the authority vested in me, do hereby proclaim Nov. 21, 1940, Thanksgiving day, and do urge upon the citizens of our state relaxation from their labors that day be observed in a spirit of thankfulness to the Creator, unto Whose boundless wisdom and gracious mercy we commend ourselves."

Last year Wisconsin had two Thanksgiving holidays, one fixed by Governor Heil on the traditional date and the other set by the president a week earlier.

Madrid Lifts U. S. News Ban
Order Is Retracted Following Conference Of Diplomatic Officials

Madrid — (AP) — The Spanish government today lifted its order, issued yesterday, which banned the United States press from operating in Spain.

Correspondents were told that their situation would remain normal.

The announcement followed a visit to the foreign office by United States Ambassador Alexander Weddell.

No details of this conference were given out.

The ban announced yesterday, to take effect probably Monday, as a reprisal for what Spanish officials said was the United States' failure to permit correspondents of E. F. E., the official Spanish news agency, to enter America.

All Town's Eligible Males are Volunteers
Morley, Tenn. — (AP) — This little east Tennessee town of about 200 inhabitants is still hitting the ball for Uncle Sam.

Its perfect record of sending every eligible male into military service as a volunteer was upheld yesterday when Olan Gene Thomas, just turned 18, enlisted in the army.

Thomas was the twenty-eighth volunteer to enlist from Morley. Now recruiting officers will have to wait until the other lads grow up before Morley can send another.

R.A.F. Fliers Drop Bombs On Hamburg

London — (AP) — German bombers, attacking in formation, smashed at London with sudden fury early today in a "grand scale" raid which the British Press association estimated involved upward of 500 planes—as many as the nazis reportedly hurled against industrial Coventry the night before.

The press association's air correspondent declared that "the enemy used as many planes as were used in the attack on Coventry," and added: "It was an attack on a grand scale."

Civilian casualties were feared great as explosives and fire bombs rained down through rifts in the clouded sky and shattered apartment buildings, shops and homes in the suddenly-intensified attack.

Raid On Hamburg
A government communiqué which described the bombing as "heavy and sustained" declared that "in view of the weight of the attack, the number of dead and injured was smaller than 'might have been expected.'"

An air ministry communiqué credited British fliers with "heavy attacks" of their own overnight—aimed principally at the big German port of Hamburg, where "docks, oil plants and other objectives" were said to have been bombed.

Other British squadrons were said to have attacked airdromes and the "invasion ports" in German-occupied territory.

The air ministry said "it is now evident that last night's attack on Hamburg was a very satisfactory operation. The principal targets of the city were hit, and all our aircraft returned safely."

Fires Guide Bombers
While London echoed with the roar of bombs and the staccato bark of anti-aircraft guns, the red glow of fires in ruined Coventry guided other Nazi bombers to new attacks on England's industrial midlands.

A communiqué, however, said "little damage and few casualties have been reported" from bombed midlands communities and indicated there was no repetition of Thursday night's terrific, concentrated assault which left parts of Coventry a rubble heap with more than 1,000 dead and injured.

Towns near London and in southwestern England also were raided. London's ground guns, credited with having beaten back several attacks early in the night, failed to stop the renewed onslaught after midnight.

Wide R.A.F. Raids
British navy pilots and those of the coastal command smashed last night at Nazi-held airdromes from Norway to northern France while their colleagues of the R.A.F. made large-scale raids on vital German bases, including Hamburg and Kiel, official sources announced today.

The far-ranging coastal campaign said the air ministry, left great fires blazing at Stavanger in Norway, and there were "substantial results" in assaults upon other airdromes in Doullens, Cambria, St. Malo and Rennes, France.

At Rennes, it was declared, an arsenal was left blazing.

Off the Danish coast a Nazi sea-plane was destroyed, the ministry reported.

The R.A.F., meanwhile, was declared to have made "large-scale operations" against railway communications, shipyards, docks and public utilities in Hamburg.

Hamburg was reported hard hit, with "many explosions and fires" in the dock and railway areas.

North of the city, said the ministry, a gas works was bombed heavily at Barmbeck.

The Kiel naval base and the ports of Ostend and Calais were assaulted in force.

King Visits Coventry
Coventry, England — (AP) — King George personally brought words of sympathy, cheer and assurance of an empire's support today to stricken Coventry—blasted to a smoking, shattered shell by a Nazi air-raid.

Taking the surviving townsman completely by surprise, the grave-faced khaki-clad king pulled up before the town hall in his big car, which had made its way through debris-strewn streets.

Instantly the cry went up, "the king, the king."

Saluting again and again he made his way through the crowd while policemen tired from long hours of duty cried "are we downhearted?"

"No," roared the throng.

The king conferred with local officials on emergency relief for the ruined industrial city.

Congress Must Act on Vetoes Bill—Lawrence

Adjournment Without Doing So Would be Violation of Mandate

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington—Constitutional lawyers are saying that congress cannot adjourn next week without acting one way or the other on a bill which President Roosevelt vetoed last summer and which has been passed by the house over that veto.

The bill is of constitutional importance itself because it provides that the attorney general of any state's interest may be involved. But the question of whether congress may adjourn without acting on a vetoed bill may prove even larger in significance.

The constitution uses the word "shall" and not "may" in ordering congress to consider a bill that has been vetoed by the president. The exact language is as follows:

"Every bill which shall have passed the house of representatives and the senate shall, before it become a law, be presented to the president of the United States. If he approve he shall sign it, but if not he shall return it, with his objections, to that house in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the objections at large on their journal, and proceed to reconsider it."

"If after such reconsideration, two-thirds of that house shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent together with the objections, to the other house, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two-thirds of that house, it shall become a law."

The above constitutes a mandate upon congress either to approve or disapprove a presidential veto; that is, to take some action. The bill in question was vetoed on June 10. It was repassed on August 5 last by the house of representatives by a vote of 253 to 46, which is more than the necessary two-thirds.

The measure has the support of the National Association of Attorneys General, the president of which, Lawrence C. Jones, of Vermont, telegraphed Chairman Sumners of the house judiciary committee as follows:

"Enactment of Satterfield bill is meritorious and essential to the preservation of our dual system of government. The states should be given the opportunity to present evidence and argument in all cases where the constitutionality of a state law is attacked. Only under such procedure can the courts be intelligently informed and the states be protected against usurpation of powers strictly within their sphere of government."

The foregoing message came after the presidential veto and it was influential in persuading the house to disagree with the president on the subject. In the veto message, Mr. Roosevelt, presumably on the advice of the department of justice, argued that the bill "invites the states to intervene as a matter of right to attack the exercise of any federal power impairing or overriding any governmental power asserted or exercised by the states or by any of their agencies, officers or employees."

Rule Made Mandatory

The president contended that the courts already have discretionary power to allow the states to intervene in private suits where constitutional questions affecting state governments may arise, but it is pointed out, on the other hand, by proponents of the bill that the same discretionary power existed for years with respect to the right of the federal government to intervene in private suits affecting federal laws, and yet the present administration insisted in 1937 on seeing that the rule was made mandatory and not discretionary.

There is a large principle involved. The courts may be filled with men who are conscientious partisans of the federal power as the paramount instrumentality of government and they will refuse to see the argument of the state. But under the proposed legislation the states are given the right to intervene as an authority from congress itself and hence no judge can keep a state government out when the trial of the issues starts.

The president, judging by the veto message, apparently would have been willing to sign a measure which limited intervention to cases in which state statutes alone were affected, but this would not dispose of the right of a state government to intervene in a private case where an individual insisted that federal power was invading his rights as a citizen of a state whose authority seemed to be conflicting with that of the federal government.

Appleton's three banks will distribute about $60,000 in Christmas Club funds this year. The Christmas club members will receive their money the latter part of this month.

Throughout the nation, a total of $365,000,000 will be turned over to Christmas club members, it is estimated.

Wisconsin members will receive $8,400,000. New York leads all states with $106,000,000.

Await Suner
On the diplomatic front, authorized sources said Spanish Foreign Minister Ramon Serrano Suner, unofficially reported on his way to Paris, was expected to confer in Berlin shortly on the invitation of German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop.

Informed nazis said Serrano Suner was expected to spend two days in Paris and probably would reach Berlin early next week.

At the same time, Huesrev Gerede, Turkish ambassador to Berlin, was summoned to confer with his government in Ankara. The German ambassador to Turkey, Franz von Papen, who came home some time ago reportedly for pheasant shooting, remained here apparently on call for developments growing out of the recent German conferences with Soviet Russian Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov in Berlin.

'Perfect Wife,' Film Producer to Go Separate Ways

Hollywood—(AP)—Myrna Loy, the movies' "perfect wife," and her producer-husband, Arthur Hornblow, are headed toward the divorce courts.

Ending months of rumors that all was not well between them, each rumor quickly denied—Miss Loy announced through her attorney last night:

"It is with great reluctance that we admit that we are ending our marriage."

The attorney, George Cohen, said divorce proceedings would start "at an early date."

Miss Loy won her sobriquet of "the perfect wife" in a series of domestic comedies beginning with "The Thin Man," in which she and William Powell found all manner of adventure together. She was unmarried at the time, but her romance with Hornblow culminated in marriage at Ensenada, Mex., June 27, 1936.

The actress is at Palm Springs recuperating from an attack of influenza. Through her studio, she issued a statement declaring:

"This is a decision we reluctantly reached after almost a year on both Arthur's part and mine to arrange a way of life that could find happiness for both."

To which Hornblow added:

"We have tried for a long time to adjust the inescapable complications of our careers."

Rubbish Dumped in College Ave. Ravine

The city this week started to dump rubbish into the ravine on College avenue at Division street, according to Gene Harris, street commissioner. Persons who have rubbish to dispose of may bring it to the dumping site, he said.

in the first instance, and the house in voting irrespective of party to disregard the veto, has taken a generous position with regard to the rights of the states, going back to the original conception of the federal government, but as between the federal and state governments where the conflict arises out of issues involving private litigants.

To grant the request of the state governments, whose attorneys generally by overwhelming vote now plead for a day in court where their interests are affected, is to forward the cause of democratic government, but if congress next week neglects to act on the bill either by approving or disapproving it, it would seem to be a direct violation of a constitutional mandate. Such a precedent may furnish an interesting commentary on the manner in which fundamental rights are being neglected.

Nazis Again Trying to Get Through Blockade

BY FRED VANDERSCHMIDT

New York—(AP)—The nazis are making another attempt to break the British blockade, the first on a sizeable scale since early in the war.

The start of this adventure can scarcely be called auspicious. Two of the four German freighters which left Tampico, packed to the beam-ends with material to keep the German war machine going, ran into distress before they were out of sight of land. One of them is burning, the other back in port with machinery trouble. Still another ship, heading eastward from Colombia, is reported to have been sent to the bottom by the British navy's Caribbean squadron.

Nevertheless, the fact that these ships in such number are leaving the ports where they have sheltered for more than a year—and leaving with every evidence of haste—has considerable significance.

First of all, it is evidence of the steady, silent pressure which the garrote of the British blockade is applying to the neck of Germany.

Second, it illustrates the Nazi belief that their U-boats and planes and the length of the axis coastline have so weakened the British Atlantic patrols that it now may be possible to bring contraband cargoes from the western hemisphere.

Third, and perhaps most important, the departure of these ships may be timed to precede an offensive against Gibraltar, which is vital to Britain not only as the guardian of the western Mediterranean but as a blockade base for southern Europe and Africa.

In other words, the nazis and their Italian friends may be confident that by the time the German freighters get to Spain, where most of them appear to be headed, Gibraltar will not be British and the warship patrols either will be so weakened in the Mediterranean or engaged in urgent business elsewhere.

This is no isolated straw in the wind about Gibraltar. Right now, Ramon Serrano Suner, brother-in-law of Francisco Franco and foreign minister to Spain, is traveling toward Berlin.

Senor Serrano Suner is the axis' best friend in Spain. Even if it is not quite time for him to discuss passage of German troops through Spain toward Gibraltar, Serrano Suner is very much interested indeed in breaking the British blockade, for it is pinching Spain, too, and Spain is hungry.

So it is safe to say that Spain will do all she can to help the axis open the sea lanes again. Spain already has performed preliminary service by moving into the once internationalized zone of Tangier, hard across the Gibraltar straits from the frowning British rock.

To Get Protection

As for German freighters, or those of them which did get away from Mexico, they probably will not be long on their trip east. There is a German raider in the Atlantic, perhaps a pocket battleship, which already has plucked a number of victims from at least one British convoy. It is entirely possible that this raider will rendezvous with one or more of the freighters, take on oil and supplies, and keep a watchful eye on the adventures as they cruise warily toward Europe, taking full advantage of the long pre-war winters.

But there are long odds against the German freighters getting even out of the Caribbean, for the British still are on constant guard there. On the other side of the Atlantic, the Royal Navy has, so far, been equal to the demands of a blockade that now stretches from the North Cape to Madagascar.

How tight this blockade is stretched was illustrated the other day by an over-zealous shot that crossed the bows of an American ship, and it probably is more than a coincidence that this German attempt to crack the blockade comes at a time when some Germans are eating dog meat.

convention quarters as the first step toward a reconciliation and an understanding on a program.

La Crosse—(AP)—By a two vote margin 157 to 155—the Wisconsin Industrial Union Council (CIO) voted yesterday to ask John L. Lewis to remain as president of the CIO.

Roll call on the "draft Lewis" resolution, introduced by the Allis-Chalmers United Automobile Workers union of West Allis, was interrupted by frequent challengers and counter-challenges.

With the count tied at 154, the deciding votes were cast by the farm equipment workers.

Speaking on behalf of the resolution, Harold Christoffel, president of the Allis-Chalmers local, declared:

"It is not an issue whether Lewis will run for office again. He will make up his own mind. I do not think he will run, but that does not stop me saying to Lewis and the world that we owe him a debt."

Winand G. Kult, of the Nash-Kelvinator local of the UAW, opposed the resolution, asserting:

"The workers of America elected President Roosevelt and Lewis spoke against the man we wanted. As workers we should call a spade a spade. . . . Lewis has lost prestige, and we must have some one who can gain more for us in the years to come."

Get Deer Hunting Tag Early, Hantschel Says

John E. Hantschel, Outagamie county clerk, today advised deer hunters to secure their deer tags as soon as possible. Hantschel said that the county has a supply of 1,700 tags and that until today less than 200 have been sold. Last year 1,700 were sold, and Hantschel fears a last minute rush that might result in some hunters being unable to get a tag to hunt.

Streamline Designer Will Overhaul Ringling Circus

BY GLADWIN HILL

Miami, Fla.—(AP)—Next year my be your last chance to see a real old-fashioned circus, like the one where you carried water to the elephants when you were a kid.

Norman Bel Geddes, the streamline designer who created the New York World's fair highway future, joined the Ringling Brothers-Barnum and Bailey circus today to start a 2-year modernization project calculated to produce for the season of 1942 a "big show" as different from the traditional circus as modern cars are from the model-T.

The elephants, clowns and acrobats will still be there, he guaranteed, but most of the exterior paraphernalia will be different—including, instead of the conventional "big top," a canvas auditorium without poles, suspended from huge portable steel towers 160 feet high.

Changes next year, Geddes and circus President John Ringling North said, would be confined to the side show tent and the menagerie, where the customary oval of cage wagons will be eliminated and the animals displayed in an integrated exhibition in surroundings resembling their natural habitats.

The designer said he was trying to get transparent plastic bars strong enough to pen in wild animals and yet be invisible to spectators, but that he might have to compromise on metal bars with special chromium plate to make them inconspicuous.

North said his customary winter trip to Europe in search of new circus acts would be precluded by the war, and that instead he would go to South America, where many outstanding European acts have migrated.

War Situation Today

Fighting Is Accelerated in Nearly Every Combat Area

By the Associated Press

Europe's war touched the western hemisphere today with a maritime incident blurred in detail but recalling the scuttling a year ago of the Nazi pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee and the liner Columbus.

While the Nazi air force was opening a grand-scale attack on London, four heavily-laden German merchant ships, in Tampico, Mexico, since the start of the war, made a dash for the open sea to take a chance against the British blockade.

Early today one of them was reported in flames, not more than 15 miles off shore, and another was being towed back with a breakdown in her machinery.

They had all received clearance papers from the Mexican port authorities and there were reports they might be trying to carry supplies to a German raider in the Caribbean sea or the South Atlantic.

In Rome, Il Giornale d'Italia reported an Italian submarine operating in the Atlantic had sunk one of the 50 United States destroyers acquired recently by Britain.

Heavy Fighting

The Greek-Italian war took a fiercer turn, with the Greeks reporting smashing into a big Italian army westward from Lake Prespa and toward the Albanian port of Valona.

Some of the heaviest fighting of that conflict was reported under way, with the Greeks threatening to cut the Italian army into three pieces.

The attack on London opened furiously. As many as 500 planes took part in the assault, the British press association noted.

Nazi warplanes rained incendiary bombs and explosives on London last night and early today, starting scores of fires and burying uncounted victims in the ruins.

Casualties were believed heavy especially in one block of apartments leveled by Nazi bombs in a furious attack on the British capital.

The attack occurred while British rescue squads still dug victims from the smoking wreckage of an ancient Coventry, the industrial midlands city about 85 miles north of London where 500 German war planes killed or injured more than 1,000 Britons in a gigantic "revenge" raid Thursday night.

Report Hospital Hit

R.A.F. planes lashed back at Germany's port city of Hamburg, but German reports said no military objectives were hit. A number of persons were killed and injured when a large hospital was hit.

D.N.B., the German official news agency, said.

Britons claimed a toll of 19 German planes in yesterday's fighting over England, or a total of 70 for the week, compared with five British planes reported lost.

Nazi spokesmen said heavy blows were dealt London's railway network in the latest raids, including direct hits on one station in central London.

Greek government spokesmen said "serious battles" were raging on the Greek-Albanian frontier but that the Italians still were retreating along a 100-mile front. The Greeks said 700 more Italian prisoners and 10 heavy guns were captured.

Informed quarters in Rome predicted an acceleration of the war in the Mediterranean shortly following the meeting between German Marshal General Wilhelm Keitel and Italian Marshal Pietro Badoglio at Innsbruck, and the talks between Adolf Hitler and Russia's premier, Molotov.

They believed heavy pressure would be brought on Turkey not to hinder axis operations against Britain's Near Eastern positions.

Reports of forthcoming conversations between Spain's foreign minister, Ramon Serrano Suner, and Nazi Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop again aroused speculation that Spain might be on the verge of actively aiding the axis war machine, at least to the extent of allowing Nazi troops to cross his country from France for an onslaught on Gibraltar.

U. S. Entering New Era in Its Relations With Mexico

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

Washington—An era of close co-operation between the United States and Mexico seems to be definitely in the wind. If this materializes, as seems probable, it will strengthen hemisphere solidarity in the face of axis attempts to divide the nations of the new world.

Friends of the Roosevelt administration have been in touch with President-elect Avila Comacho, who takes office Dec. 1, and have been favorably impressed with his attitude. It was his apparent desire for closer relations with the United States that led to the decision here to recognize Avila Comacho and to throw everything possible behind him to strengthen his position.

President Roosevelt took the unusual step of designating Vice President-elect Henry Wallace as his personal representative at the inauguration in Mexico City. Soon after he takes office, Avila Comacho will visit the United States. He is studying up on his English now as Wallace is working on his Spanish. The plan is not only to shower Avila Comacho with honors here but to have him travel about the country to see our defense work.

This prospect of a new entente cordiale between the United States and Mexico is an especially encouraging development at this time. The temperature of Pan-American relations in general is conditioned by our relations with Mexico. If we are having trouble with Mexico, it is reflected throughout Latin America in revivals of fears about the "colossus of the north." A good neighbor policy to go deeper than mere words requires above everything else good relations with our next-door neighbor.

Our relations with Mexico have not been too good of late. It has not been altogether the fault of the present Cardenas regime.

Cardenas had a revolutionary labor movement on his hands. It drove him into the oil expropriations. Insistence of American companies upon return of the properties—a political impossibility for any Mexican government—added further strain and left the situation deadlocked.

Cardenas himself has now recto be financed outside. He is opposed to foreign exploitation but wants development. He is willing to take measures to win our assistance. He is understood to be ready to make a debt settlement.

A Catholic himself, he has indicated he is ready to recognize the church. He has driven out of power the revolutionary labor leader, Lombardo Toledano, whose Communist direction and Nazi sympathies were creating much internal trouble. Avila Comacho was described earlier as a conservative surrounded by Leftists. He appears to have sloughed off the most powerful Leftist influence. He is more interested in consolidating existing reforms than in starting new ones.

Joint Defense Agreement Is Most Important Step

Most important of all, he is understood to be ready to enter into a joint defense agreement similar to the one we made recently with Canada. He appears to have decided that Mexico's lot must definitely be cast with the United States and to have turned his back upon all thought of flirting with the axis powers.

Thus the way seems to be open now for a complete freeing out of the axis influence in Mexico and for a solid front on the whole northern continent. That would have its helpful effect in promoting solidarity throughout the remainder of Latin America.

Mexico has always been a favorite spot for intrigue against the United States. It was so during the Civil war and again in the last war when we had the national guard mobilized on the Rio Grande. Germany many played upon the strained relations, and her intrigue culminated in the Zimmerman note urging

Thirty are Present At 'Round Table'

Waupaca—Covers were laid for 30 at a dinner meeting at Weyauwega Wednesday evening, when members of the faculties of schools in the conference interested in forensics, athletics and music gathered to institute a permanent "round table." Five schools will participate under the guidance of Superintendent L. K. Forest, Marion, president of the conference. He is to be assisted by Superintendent George Hendrickson, Waupaca, secretary, and Superintendent Roy Bloomquist, Manawa, vice president.

One member of each school will go to each of the other schools and the round table discussion will follow on the days set. The first of these has been set for the Wednesday before Christmas.

Attending the Weyauwega meeting were Superintendent Hendrickson, Principal Harold Canaan, Eric Becker, LeRoy Haberkorn,

Mexico to war against the United States. Publication of that note helped arouse the American public for war against Germany.

It appears as if the cooperation of the new regime in Mexico will ward off such dangers in this period.

The conference debate tournament is to open Jan. 18 at Marion. Debate is now coached by Robert Showers, as is extemporaneous reading and oratory, while Miss Miller is instructing in dramatics, declamation and reading.

Professor F. C. Mayer of Marquette University, Thursday afternoon lectured before the senior class on "Opportunities of the Defense program." This is one of a series of vocational talks planned by Principal Harold Canaan during the year.

Service Officers Will Meet Sunday

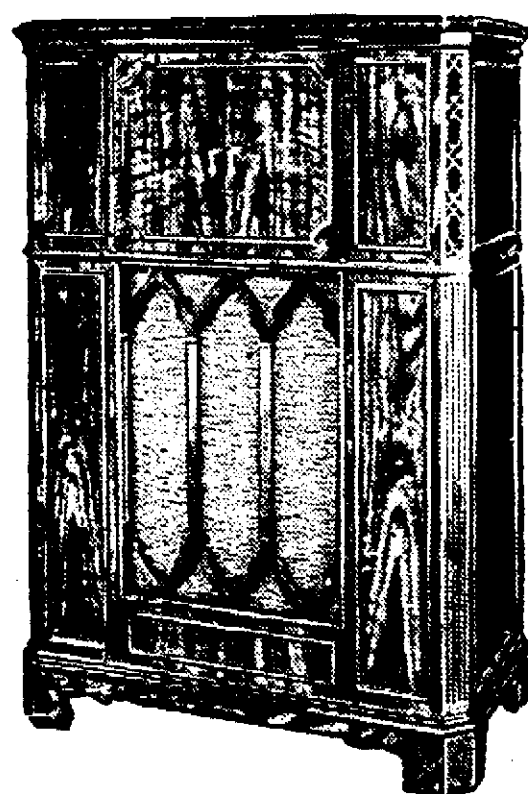

Waupaca—Nearly 100 members of the Wisconsin Service Officers' association will hold a one-day conference at the Wisconsin Veterans' Home Sunday. Many of them will bring with them the chairmen of their county boards. Others to be present are several state senators and Congressman Reid Murray.

E. J. Bernges, Juneau, president of the association, will conduct the conference. James Burns, Milwaukee, departmental service officer, will speak on rehabilitation and assistance to veterans while Eighth District Commander Arlie Pitts, Fremont, will speak of the progress made on behalf of the Home through recent legislation.

A dinner will be served at noon at the Amusement hall after which the meeting will reconvene at 1:30. The conference will draw from cities all over the state including Superior, Ashland, Racine, Milwaukee, Madison and Kenosha.

Colonel C. L. Brosius, acting commandant of the Home, states that the meeting is not a closed one and will open at 10 o'clock Sunday morning.

Krause, Mueller New Members of Road Committee

Supervisors Rename
Lathrop, Bottensek,
McDaniel to Posts

Two new members were named to the county highway committee by the county board yesterday afternoon. They are Supervisors Fred Krause, Appleton, and Alfred Mueller, town of Seymour. Re-elected to the committee were Supervisors Jess Lathrop, Hortonville; Frank McDaniel, town of Kaukauna; and John Bottensek, Dale. George Fiedler was renamed relief director for two years.

Armin Scheurle, who did not run for reelection to the county board last spring, was ineligible for reelection to the highway committee. Martin Williams, Combined Locks, was defeated for reelection to the committee.

Lathrop with 49 votes and McDaniel with 57 were renamed on the first ballot from a list of 14 candidates. Mueller with 34 votes and Bottensek with 30 were named on the third ballot. Supervisor Patrick J. Heenan and Krause then led in the balloting until the sixth ballot when Krause polled 36 to 17 for Heenan.

The other nominees for the committee were Supervisors Henry Van der Hey, Arthur Genske, Peter N. Day, A. W. Zerbe, Ben Shimek, Louis J. Faust and Kurt Rogers.

Three candidates sought the office of relief director with Fiedler polling 34 votes, Arthur L. Collar, Hortonville, 14 and A. J. Hinz, Appleton, 5.

Charles Kerklow, Bear Creek, was renamed trustee of the county asylum for three years. Roy Nelson was renamed trustee of the county sanatorium for three years. Lewis F. Nelson, Kaukauna, was re-elected a trustee of the county normal school for three years.

A petition of the town of Grand Chute to have W. Wisconsin avenue from Highway 47 west a mile included in the county trunk system was referred to the highway committee. It was pointed out that it would form a connecting link between Highways 47 and 10.

The board spent most of this morning's session hearing annual reports.

Miss Marie Klein, county nurse, in reporting on the work of the health department during the last year said there were no cases of diphtheria or small pox reported during the period. However, the greater part of the work of the department still is in disease control, the county nurse said.

A total of 5,538 children in the county had their teeth checked in the last year, according to the report submitted by Miss Maybelle Cushman, dental hygienist. Of this number 53 per cent were found with teeth stains, 25 per cent were free from dental decay, 9 per cent had lost permanent teeth, 66 per cent had deciduous cavities, 39 per cent had cavities in permanent teeth and 22 per cent were found to have visited the dentist during the year, she said.

J. F. Magnus, county agent, in giving his annual report said that Outagamie county farmers "did a grand job" with the quality milk program launched during the year. He said the quality dairy sales went held recently in the county was a success and that merchants reported that dairy products sales tripled during the week the event was held. He told supervisors that soil testing will continue throughout the winter and samples may be submitted for test.

The board appropriated $5,000 of the $6,000 requested by the soldiers and sailors relief commission for 1941.

Victim of Paralysis Nears End of Arduous Journey From Orient

Chicago — (AP) — Stricken with infantile paralysis, Charles P. Rockwood, Jr., 23, will reach Chicago next week after a 12,000-mile journey that included dodging Japanese anti-aircraft shells.

The story of Rockwood's adventures was told yesterday by his father, a consulting psychologist in Chicago.

Rockwood went to China as an English instructor after graduation from Yale university in 1939. He was stationed at Yuan Ling, Hunan province, when stricken.

He was borne to the Yale-China hospital at Changhai by litter and river launch in a 3-day journey, and later was put aboard a plane which carried him to Hong Kong after a flight over Japanese lines. Anti-aircraft shells greeted the plane over the lines but none hit the ship.

Rockwood will land Monday at Vancouver aboard the Empress of Asia. Another Chicago paralysis victim, Frederick Snite, Jr., also was stricken in China. Unlike Snite, Rockwood's lungs were not affected and he needed no iron lung as Snite required.

Weatherman Has Good News; Weekend to be Fair, Warmer

Beset by roaring winds and sub-normal temperatures this week, inhabitants of Appleton and vicinity greeted the weatherman's pronouncements with glee today.

A "fair and warmer" weekend was promised; in fact, it was already in evidence today as the sun broke into the clear in a blue sky and the mercury began to climb. The thermometer atop the Post-Crescent building stood at 31 degrees at 11:15 this morning, compared with 23 at 12:30 yesterday.

A reading of 15 above at 9 o'clock yesterday morning was the coldest for the 24-hour period starting at that hour.

The onset for warmer weather pleased the football fans, who like to have stimulating but not numbing temperatures on Saturday afternoons.

The federal bureau at Chicago reported that temperatures in the middle Mississippi valley have risen 20 to 30 degrees from levels earlier this week. Fresh winds on the Great Lakes and snow flurries over northern water caused warnings to be issued to small craft.

San Diego, Calif., with 89, was the warmest spot in the country yesterday.

Gives Contract For Foundation On Labor Basis

City Is Criticized
For Method of Letting
Work on Pool House

The United Construction Service, Inc., Appleton, yesterday was given the contract by the board of public works to furnish labor and mortar for the foundation of the municipal swimming pool bathhouse.

The low bid was 12 cents per square foot for 10-inch concrete blocks and 17 cents for 16-inch concrete blocks. The only other bidder was the Charles A. Green and Son company.

The city will build the footings for the foundation and furnish the concrete blocks and the contractor will place them to grade level.

The Miron and St. Aubin Construction company did not bid but sent a letter saying that the firm is "opposed to the city participating in the construction industry" while the Koepke Construction company, which also did not bid, wrote "in respect for the contracting fraternity it wouldn't be fair to submit a bid."

Koepke wrote that the city had agreed to let contracts on all of the pool except the pool proper.

Mayor Goodland said the work is being done this way to get a start on the bathhouse before the frost gets too deep to prevent construction work. He said the remainder of the bathhouse work will be let by contract.

Maintenance of Low Prices Termed Essential to Defense

BY HUGH S. JOHNSON

Washington, D. C.—In this war preparation our administration is facing a colossal job, I think it got off to a very bad start, but fairness and candor compel me to say that it seems now to be getting into its stride. It will succeed. It's got to succeed.

Having had intensive experience in some vital aspects of a previous effort, I feel competent to comment on a few things—and not from theory. Whether it resulted in some small part from this column or otherwise, I think I see practices advocated here, that I would have used had I been in a more responsible position.

A case in point is selective service, which not only successfully followed the World War model in both fraction and terminology but also made the improvements and changes then learned and repeatedly suggested here.

Recently this column has been harping on the means we found to control inflation in 1918. Most of it occurred before we got into the war. Our controls did at least delay it. Consider the prices of iron and steel. On the basis of an index figure of 64.7 in 1915, they had risen to 170 in April 1917. Before our controls clicked they went to 230.02 in July 1917. By November of 1917, they were 143.7.

Almost more important than winning battles is low prices and increased production. This insures not only ample military supplies, it means also civilian welfare. It may mean permanent prosperity and reemployment.

It certainly gives tolerable living conditions and avoids the burden of fantastical debt after the war and havoc of a crazy inflationary boom, and an inevitable bust and unending years of disastrous depression, such as we are suffering now.

I have discussed war inflation and its cures. Now I want to talk about a kindred subject upon which I have merely touched—taxation. It is the one in the book and the election is now over. We can afford to be sane and efficient.

Revenue, Production Should Be Increased

What we need is not merely more taxes, but more revenue and more production. Revenue is mostly a sum in multiplication—"total production, profits and sales multiplied by whatever percentage of taxes you assess on them." Revenue at any given tax rate will surely rise as you increase production, profits and sales. It may not rise at all if you increase the percentage of taxes. It is more likely to fall and produce the worst evils of war—high prices and reduced production. For example, a 40 per cent tax on 60 billions of national production is 32 billions of revenue, but a 32 per cent tax on 100 billions produces the same amount. In between is no difference in revenue, but there is a terrific difference of 20 billions in price production, consumption and employment.

Excessive taxes produce three results as sure as sunrise. They reduce total revenue because they invariably increase all prices, and reduce production and employment. They do the latter for another reason. Since they must be paid at all events, they decrease the incentive of people to invest to produce. We must finance production in this war by putting private capital to work, or we shall pay for the failure to the end of our days. The way to keep it from working is unreasonable to increase taxes on its normal gains.

Taxes as low as possible, low prices, high production, consumption and employment are the vital things to this nation not only for today but for generations to come—more vital than victories and battles. I think this administration is on that track. Pray God it may stay there.

During the ritualistic work of the order Mrs. Will Behling and Mrs.

The Labor Board Improves

In naming Mr. Madden of the National Labor Relations Board to the Court of Claims the President has kicked him upstairs. He has accomplished an improvement in the Labor Board at the expense of the Court of Claims.

Since the Labor Board was one of the principal instruments of favoritism and partiality in the country during the last few years the general average of affairs is improved by the President's action. But the calibre and mentality of the man put on the Court of Claims is made evident by his rulings on the Labor Board.

To fittingly characterize many of the Labor Board's decisions we do not call upon any of the participants. They are interested persons. We do call upon the courts, and in many instances courts presided over by New Deal judges.

These courts set aside Labor Board actions because, as they often wrote, there "was not a scintilla of evidence" to uphold them. It was like bringing a man into court to hear himself pronounced guilty of some offense without any evidence to that effect whatever.

The beating that honest and legitimate industry has taken at the hands of the Labor Board is not generally appreciated. But the patience both of industrialists and the workers who fought the yoke of servitude in pursuing their remedies even against a packed and partisan board is a fine characteristic of Americanism in anyone.

The President has advanced the cause of justice in the labor world by his decision to reappoint Mr. Madden. And this is the second of the original three who had to be let out.

The Greeks Can Fight

As thousands of Italians lie in all those grotesque shapes the human form adopts when death comes suddenly, and the equipment is broken and littered all around, one should turn from this scene of "glorious" conquest and compare it with the staged affairs created in the name of dictators to impress the multitude.

Let them remember Mussolini shouting: "Live dangerously" and then take a peek at what their leader meant.

It is the story of Russia against Finland. The man defending his home can lick his weight, and several times his weight, in wildcats. But he cannot continue indefinitely when the odds are 10 or 40 to 1.

The more the Italian army is observed the surer comes the conviction that the stomach of Italy have neither heart nor stomach for the wild venture into which their leaders have led them. The Italian is a stubborn fighting man. But he has a broad sense of justice. He loves life and the beautiful things of it altogether too well to depart upon a consistent mission of cruelty and wrong. Moreover Versailles hurt him not. He gained from the last war although not to the extent promised him by France and England, his allies.

Perhaps Mussolini started on this venture into Greece to provide a little cheap glory for the thoughtless masses. He met a determined foe, well officered, and with plans of both defense and attack that proved brilliant.

The glory goes to Greece and it will stay there in defeat or victory.

The Mistaken Divinity Students

The eight scolded divinity students who took a year in prison rather than register for the draft had a grossly mistaken notion of conscientious objection and a fearfully exaggerated idea of their own importance.

America is not asking any conscientious objector to serve in the army. But it is requiring every person to register. He who cannot see that registration is required solely in the interests of order, sanity and justice must be shortsighted indeed.

Unless we have registration every person would be judge of his own fitness and serviceability in the army. He might say, "I have poor eyes," or "My heart is on the bum" as well as to say, "I am a conscientious objector."

All that was asked of these divinity students was to make known the condition of their conscience in an orderly and regular manner. If it were found that they belonged to an organization that could not conscientiously serve they would not be asked to serve. In this condition of the law and in face of this wholly reasonable demand upon them they have practically said that the government can go and sit on the brimstone.

They are wrong, of the point of stupidity, but, worse than that, unless they speedily mend their processes of thinking, they will do more harm to religious orders than the devil ever did.

From Quiet Lanes to the Battle

The brave man is not he who feels no fear. For that were stupid and irrational; But he whose noble soul its fear subdues. And bravely does the danger nature shrink from.

The English are chiseling other names upon their long scroll of honor since the German battleship attack upon a convoy in mid-Atlantic.

There is the captain, Fogarty Feegan, who made the decision and stood on the bridge until his ship went down. He lost no time deciding either. Armed only with guns to repel a submarine he quickly turned, faced the great steel monster, and drove toward her with all the speed his engines commanded, and his puny guns firing. Twilight was near and escape was possible for those valuable cargo ships if someone would make the sacrifice that is supreme. The captain had shortly been recalled from retirement because needed in active service. Probably he left a little garden hanging close upon a quiet village. From tending plants and flowers and gossiping at the local inn he had come out to be the central figure in a heroic episode. He would be the kind too, who would probably laugh with joy to see his ruse effective, the cargo ships scurrying over the horizon and the steel monster put to the necessity of closing in upon and spending its time in sinking the presumptuous attacker.

The crew caught his spirit. When a shell blew away the flag and others were raining upon its decks a brawny sailor climbed into the rigging to tie up another Union Jack. That boat was going to sink like a gentleman. No power on earth could shoot her flag away. None of the formalities were to be overlooked. As the black and bitterly cold ocean yawned to receive them it is likely those fellows smoothed their hair and adjusted their ties to go down according to rule.

There was not a shadow of a chance. A toddling child of three lost in the jungle and stalked by a famished tiger,—that was the setup.

War and Democracy

A member of the English parliament by the name of Ramsay is in jail. He has been in jail nearly six months.

Mr. Ramsay wants to know what the charge against him is. He cannot learn it. He demands a trial. He cannot secure it. He offers bail. It is rejected.

Mr. Ramsay's arrest was made in pursuance to a general act authorizing the government to detain without trial anyone suspected of being concerned "in acts prejudicial to the public safety."

Such is the hard and bitter road democracy travels in war. For the arrest of Ramsay is no doubt wise. Even if the government can make no definite charge and bring no definite proof it must be allowed a good deal of leeway during the terrible emergency of war to check the possible damage of those who may be classed as members of the Fifth Column.

But, of course, the great menace to free government is always evident. A member of the Commons is put in jail. How easy to silence all opposition by the use of this powerful but dangerous club. But democracy can be safeguarded and secured during its perilous days in no other manner. It will always sound a little odd but the only way to save democracy during war is to abolish it.

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell

SILENCE

So many wonders are achieved in silence. The dawn drifts quietly from night's long arm. The rose breaks into blossoming through silence. The stars come from the dark without alarm.

The first green blade of grass pushes in silence. From the vast caverns of earth's mystery. The snow comes down and wraps the world in silence. The forest fern is mute; so is the tree.

The beautiful and good are wrought in silence. Perhaps we would do well to cultivate. This mood of Nature, knowing that in silence We may augment our strength, and dream, and wait.

FIREPLACES

The tradition of the open fireplace is slow to die. There is a fireplace in most of the pictures of model living rooms.

Devotion to this method of keeping cold out of dwellings has varied a good deal. The pioneers built fireplaces not because of their sacred significance, but because they couldn't get anything they thought better. They eagerly welcomed the introduction of iron stoves. The family could sit all the way around the stove.

Later the heating plant was banished to the cellar. And in time its presence in the "sitting room" was missed. Families still gathered in the living room of an evening. So when houses began to be "modernized," fireplaces came back, real fireplaces in which logs were burned. Often the logs had to be brought long distances and cost more than coal, but the satisfaction of the fireplace justified the expense.

Invention progressed. It became necessary to "fix the fire" only at rare intervals. The thermostat kept temperature just right. Anyway, fixing the fire is a messy job. That consideration turned the tide of fireplace popularity. Why bring the mess into the best room?

Again invention offered. The fireplace was in-

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY GO ROUND

BY DREW PARKSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN
Washington—To the boys on the Democratic side of the house of representatives, many of them still nervously mopping their brows over narrow escapes, the hero of the hair-raising campaign was no big-shot party figure.

The big names got all the publicity, but in the house all the praise is for a youngster whose name was scarcely mentioned. But he left his mark on the battle—as GOP campaign managers will ruefully attest.

Their nemesis and the Democrats' unknown hero was Representative Lyndon Baines Johnson, a rangy, 32-year-old, black-haired, handsome Texan, who has been in congress only three years but who has political magic at his finger tips, and a way with him that is irresistible in action.

How Johnson took over the Democratic congressional campaign, when it looked as if the party was sure to lose the house, and without fanfare turned a rout into a cocky triumph, is one of the untold epics of the election.

Three weeks before November 5 you could have cut the gloom around Democratic congressional headquarters with a knife. The campaign committee, headed by Representative Pat Green, a charming and dawning Virginian, had collapsed like the minister's one-hoss shay. Activity had so bogged down that hard-pressed candidates had quit even asking for help. It was just a waste of time.

For the Republicans it looked like a lead-pipe cinch at long last to regain control of the house. They needed only 43 new seats, and strongly supported GOP candidates were storming the ramparts against frantic Democratic incumbents in more than 100 districts.

ENTER JOHNSON
This was the situation when Speaker Sam Rayburn and Floor Leader John McCormack went to the president and told him something had to be done and done quick. He said, "What do you suggest?"

"Put Lyndon Johnson in charge and give him a free hand."

"Sold," replied Roosevelt. "That was my idea, too. That boy has got what's needed. Tell Lyndon to see me tomorrow."

Johnson saw the president at breakfast the next morning. Three hours later he had an office (tucked away in a downtown business building) and a staff rolling in high gear. And it continued rolling fifteen and eighteen hours a day for the remainder of the campaign.

The response to Johnson's dynamic drive was electric. Imperiled candidates, who had given up hope of any outside help, fell on his neck with piteous cries. Overnight SOS calls began to pour in from coast to coast. None went unheeded.

In all, Johnson aided more than 150 Democratic congressional candidates. The results speak for themselves. Instead of capturing the house, the Republicans lost six seats, and the Democrats emerged stronger than ever.

BORN POLITICIAN
Lyndon Johnson is a born politician. His father was a member of the Texas legislature for many years and Lyndon plunged up to his neck in politics while still in college, putting on a whirlwind campaign for a state senate candidate.

But Johnson didn't come up the easy way. He worked for his tuition through San Marcos Teachers college as a day laborer on highway projects, later taught public speaking in Houston schools.

There he caught the eye of Representative Dick Kleberg, one of the owners of the famed King Ranch, largest in the world, who brought him to Washington as his secretary in 1932. Several years later, when the National Youth administration was created, Johnson, who had attracted the attention of leading New Dealers, was appointed NYA director for Texas.

He held this job until 1937, when the veteran Representative James Buchanan died and Johnson entered the lists with eight others for the seat. He won hands down in the first run-off.

ROOSEVELT FAVORITE

Johnson made no speeches in his first two years in the house, but he made himself felt where it really counted.

For his district he wangled the remarkable total of $71,766,561 in federal loans and projects. Included were three low-rent housing projects, two rural electrification projects (one of them, at Pedernales, the largest in the country), and a number of PWA and WPA undertakings.

When there is anything like that around, Johnson is right there getting a big slice for his Tenth Texas district.

Among the house leaders, Johnson quickly became known as a staunch New Dealer who at the same time remained on cordial personal terms with the anti-New Dealer and liked by the Garretts and is also a favorite of the president.

Roosevelt has a fatherly affection for young Johnson, frequently consults him on political affairs, and is quickly grooming him for a high party post.

The president is fond of relating a story of Johnson's political wizardry; how as an unknown newcomer he blitzkrieged the "Little Congress" and got himself elected "Speaker" of this organization of house secretaries and clerks.

"DON'T BET AGAINST HIM"

It is a "Little Congress" tradition that its "Speaker" is chosen by seniority. It was unheard of to elect a newcomer—that is, it was until Johnson hit town as Kleberg's secretary. At the first "Congress" meeting he attended, he announced he would be a candidate in the election the following week.

The "machine" snickered, but on the night of the election they changed their tune. The biggest attendance in history showed up. A mob of strange young people packed the corridor outside the house caucus room. At a signal from Johnson they lined up, marched up to the tellers, showed their credentials and voted. The unknown newcomer from Texas was elected "Speaker" by two to one.

"Say, who is that guy?" gasped one of the deflated candidates. "He comes to one meeting and takes over the place at the next!"

"That's Lyndon Johnson," proudly volunteered one of his supporters. "If he tells you he can't be elected president of the United States—don't bet against him."

Note—A teetotaler, young Johnson has two "vices." He smokes cigarettes incessantly and will eat red hot Mexican chili, mixed with scrambled eggs, at any hour of the day or night. (Copyright, 1940) stalled that gave forth a warm glow. The glow came at the snap of an electric fixture.

And now, often the fixture is not snapped. Why bother? The young folks are out late. Dad and Mother don't care to eat alone in the big dining room. It's simpler to go out to dinner.

So the fireplace remains unlighted in the dark living room, a beautiful memorial to a dear old tradition.—Detroit News.

A Bystander In Washington

BY JACK STINNETT

Washington—While the world has been rolling on with other and more momentous matters, a revolution has been taking place in the tepees and around the council fires of the American Indians.

Out comes the Bureau of Indian Affairs with the results of a survey extending from Alaska to the sands of the Mojave.

Mojava that will knock the feathers right out of your war bonnet. The facts are that the old idea that Indian women are subordinate to their braves has been proved to be as dead as the pterodactyl.

A few recalcitrant old braves may still be pulling their blankets around them, shaking their braids and wondering what the modern Indian maiden is coming to, but they are in a vast minority. Younger bucks of the tribes not only have been accepting this new freedom among their women but have been aiding and abetting them in it by electing them to tribal councils and to other posts formerly held only by men.

For example in Nome, Alaska, where the community is largely dominated by men, a secret ballot for members of the council of the Nome Eskimo community—a native corporation chartered by the government—four of the five positions went to women. Only Moody Etageak saved the day for the males and came off with the not too choice post of vice president.

Suffrage For All

Commissioner of Indian Affairs John Collier says there are 135 Indian communities in the United States and Alaska where constitutions governing tribal affairs have been adopted and in not one of these is there a single stipulation against women's voting and holding office.

In the Ute tribal council in Colorado, two women, Aileen Hatch and Emma South Beecher, sit with five men. Clara Wicks, a Shasta Indian, is president of the council of the Indians in Quartz Valley, Calif. Bessie Tillohash, a Ute, is a member of the Shivwits council in Utah. Mrs. Virginia H. Walker, a full-blooded Omaha, is treasurer of the Omaha council in Nebraska. On the Wind River reservation in Wyoming, Mrs. Nellie F. Scott is president of the Arapahoe council. The Fort Hall (Idaho) reservation business council now has its first woman member in Sarah P. Snipe, a full-blood Bannock.

I could go on—the list is long. Mr. Collier says this change in Indian affairs really has taken place in the last six years. The Indian reorganization act in 1934 gave Indian groups the right to draft their constitutions for local self-government, to elect their own officers, and to borrow from the federal revolving credit fund to establish their tribes in economic enterprise.

In Civil Service Jobs

The Indian maiden had learned a thing or two from their white sisters and lost no time in getting the vote and using it. Since the women already had established themselves in the arts and crafts, the sewing, canning, poultry raising and other things by which the Indian family income is supplemented, their place at the new council tables immediately became important.

In one other respect, the government has given the Indian woman a "break" in her search for a new freedom. The reorganization act also set forth that Indians should be given civil service preference in the office of Indian affairs. Hundreds of Indian girls have been given jobs since then.

There are 100 Indian women now teaching in the Indian service schools and almost that many are graduate nurses in Indian service hospitals. One more generation, and no one ever will believe that time was when the squaw's place—only place—was in the tepee.

Now it appears that it may be almost two full years from the date set in the law before the program will go into effect.

NEIGHBORS' TAXES

The federal Bureau of agricultural economics released a highly important set of figures the other day, figures showing that taxes on land in Wisconsin are substantially higher than those in any of the immediately adjacent states.

That conclusion in itself isn't particularly new. Almost everybody has known, and has said, that property taxes are high in Wisconsin and out of line with the rest of the public revenue system in the state.

What is significant is the fact that the neighbor states in which the property tax situation is more favorable are those which have installed sales taxes.

That fact may furnish a hint of what to expect when the legislative hopper starts churning six or seven weeks from today. There is no assurance, or evidence, that sales taxation will become a fact in Wisconsin. But proposals for sales taxes will almost certainly be introduced.

DAVIN TO GO

The state government soon will lose one of its best known and best liked top-notch officials, Thomas Davlin of Berlin, former chairman of the state highway commission, and for a decade a member of that body.

Davlin is one of the key politicians of the Progressive party, a faithful servant of the LaFollette family, and trusted advisor for that family for many years.

Barring a miracle of magnanimity on the part of Governor Heil, Davlin will say farewell to his capitol office in March, when the governor will have the opportunity to appoint a Republican predecessor, the first Republican to sit with the commission in many years. Tom Pattison, secretary, was reappointed to a six year term just before Phil LaFollette left office two years ago, and Chairman William E. O'Brien was reappointed by Heil last year.

When the governor's office needed the good-will of Democratic legislators, and was willing to make a few patronage concessions to get it.

Does it help a person's eyes if he takes off his spectacles occasionally and continues with his work if it doesn't strain the eyes? (L. T.)

"Well, It Worked in Chicago"

Under the CAPITOL DOME

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison — A good current example of the tortoise pace at which government bureaucracy moves is offered in the latest postponement of the civil service program for county pension department.

After almost two years of dickerings over a program which theoretically had to become effective 10 months ago, the federal security board this week informed the state and county officials involved that it had not yet approved a plan submitted by them. Result of that failure is that the whole program will be delayed until next spring at least, for the next meeting of all the county boards of Wisconsin is in May.

It is a fact of course that neither the state nor the counties were particularly anxious to have the civil service program foisted upon them. The issue was forced by the federal social security board, which in 1939 got mandatory legislation through congress. But when the compulsion was clear both the state and the counties went to work immediately, and many weeks ago had formulated the Wisconsin plan of operation. Federal representatives pecked away at it, however, finding omissions, inadequacies and errors, with the result that nothing has been accomplished to date.

Now it appears that it may be almost two full years from the date set in the law before the program will go into effect.

Personal Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author

PREVENTION

Some kind reader sends a clipping which describes the resuscitation of a drowned child. A baby 18 months old wandered away from the care of his nurse in the park. A woman nearby heard cries when the nurse missed the child and could not find him. The woman summoned the police and the bushes round about were searched. Finally a park worker saw the baby's head above the surface of the water in a duck pond. A policeman removed the child from the water and asked the woman to take him and the child to the hospital in her car.

The woman refused. Instead she insisted the child be given artificial respiration right there and then, and showed the policeman and the park worker how to do it.

So the child was resuscitated and restored alive to the parents, who, the item adds, expressed their appreciation to all those who had assisted in the child's rescue and revival.

There is, unfortunately, a marked tendency on the part of a large class of Americans to assume they know it all and do not need instruction. I see a great deal of this in the medical profession—doctors who take up new-fangled methods and attempt to apply them without the formality of instruction by experts, and who then condemn the method for their own bungling. Probably there are millions of Americans who do not know how to resuscitate in an emergency—and emergency which may come at any time to anyone—merely because they are unwilling to learn, because they prefer to assume they know.

When the woman who saved this child's life said she had learned how artificial respiration is given, there was a gasp. Dr. Brady's health column, probably she referred to the booklet on "Resuscitation" I am happy to mail any one who asks for it and incloses a stamped envelope bearing his or her address. The book is illustrated, so that by reading it carefully any child or adult can learn precisely how to resuscitate a victim of submersion, suffocation by smoke, asphyxiation by gas, carbon monoxide, carbon dioxide, or shock by electricity or lightning. If you send for the booklet, I hope that you will not rest content with merely reading the description of the method, and looking at the pictures, but that you will make sure you know how to do it, by trying it on a volunteer subject, so that your hands will remember even the most intricate moment. And when I say tragic moment I refer to the vital moment when the victim is first resuscitated—that is the moment when resuscitation may possibly keep alive the spark of life which would almost certainly go out if the application of artificial respiration is delayed.

Neenah — The juniors will tackle the seniors Monday noon for the championship of the Neenah High school class basketball tournament, according to Ole Jorgensen, physical education director.

The yearlings played the sophomores on even terms during the first quarter, which ended 6-all, but the sophomores spurred to a 16 to 8 lead at halftime. They led 21 to 10, at the end of the third period.

Shoman and Meyer sparked the winners, the former connecting with eight points and the latter getting six. Kettering counted four points to lead the freshmen, and Cloutier and Ihde each got three.

Menasha — St. Mary High school cagers will play a schedule of 19 games this season, including 12 games in the Fox Valley Catholic conference. Coach Fred Trish, starting his first season as basketball coach at the school, will have four men back from the first eight of last year.

That group includes two of the regular starters, Farnham Johnson and Sylvester Burghardt, center and guard. Johnson was the leading scorer for the Zephyrs last year, accounting for 241 points in 24 games. Other players back from the tournament squad of eight include Al Taves and Clarence Ciske.

Last year the Zephyrs won 18 games and lost 6, scoring 792 points against 539 for their opponents. They topped their conference title, took the St. Norbert invitational tournament, competed in the national Catholic tournament, and broke even in games with Kaukauna and Neenah of the North-eastern Wisconsin conference.

However, missing from that squad will be Captain William Resch, who scored 214 points, set a mark of 26 points for one game, and generally directed the team play; N. Griesbach and J. Griesbach scored 22 points in one reserve tilt.

William Dowling, a junior transfer student from St. Norbert's is battling for a place on the team at forward or guard. Coach Trish has warned the squad that all posts are open.

4-H Building Is Voted for Fairgrounds

Winnebago County to Spend $3,000 on New Dormitory for Clubs

(Post-Crescent Oshkosh Bureau)
Oshkosh — The Winnebago county board yesterday afternoon appropriated $3,000 for the construction of a dormitory to house 4-H club members during the Winnebago county fair and appropriated another $2,000 for maintenance costs at the county fairgrounds.

The dormitory grant was carried by a 37 to 7 vote after several supervisors declared that the 4-H club members should have better quarters. They were answered by opponents of the grant who said that the fair had proceeded for 20 years without such a dormitory and could get along without one for another year or two.

Supervisor Roy C. Kittleson of the town of Winchester said that the request for a dormitory had come from parents of 4-H club members and that the health factor was the first to consider. "Which do you consider more important, the cattle or the children?" he asked the board. He added that in the past few years several of the 4-H boys have slept in the cattle barn.

The question of counting the annual inspection and dinner at the county home and saylism as a regular meeting of the county board was presented to the county board but action on the question was deferred until the early part of next week.

Several supervisors said taxpayers objected to paying each supervisor $5 for the day that the county board is entertained at the county home, claiming some board members disappear about the time for the inspection.

Highway Report
The report of Highway Commissioner E. M. Bird was received by the board. He stated that county highway work during 1940 was restricted mainly to maintenance work and the blacktopping of 28 miles of road. During the year the Eureka bridge has been completed and a machine shop addition to the county garage built.

The fiscal report of the county highway department showed receipts of $348,840.94 from state and county sources, with expenditures up to November totaling $258,912.93. This leaves a balance of $86,927.93 for expenses the rest of the year.

A resolution which would return to the cemetery boards in the various townships all sums over $500 deposited by each cemetery board with the county treasurer for investment was laid over by the supervisors. The county treasurer, according to law, is required to accept these funds and pay the cemetery boards 3 per cent interest on their deposits.

There is on deposit with the county treasurer by the 26 various cemetery associations in the county the sum of $46,000, of which 20 associations have deposits ranging over $500 each. Believing it better to get the state law changed rather than the money returned to the cemetery boards to invest themselves, the county board voted to lay the resolution over to a later date.

Calloway and Douglas are Co-Captains

Right End, Center Named Leaders by Neenah Grid Team

Neenah — Eugene Calloway, rangy right end, and Roy Douglas, center and fullback, were elected by their teammates as co-captains for Neenah High school's 1940 football season at a meeting Friday evening at the school.

Coach George Christoph pointed out at the meeting that the boys aren't honorary captains. He explained that rather than elect captains at the beginning of the season, the present policy is to wait until the end of the season so that the gridgers can name the players who they think deserve the honor.

Throughout the season, however, captains are named for each game. Coach Christoph also reported that the gridgers who earned letters during the season will be named next week.

Calloway was an outstanding flankman for the Rockets this season, and he was especially accurate on snaring passes. Douglas, regular position is pivot for the forward wall, but when Fullback Ray Smith was injured, Coach Christoph assigned him to that position until Smith returned.

Beauty and You

By Patricia Lindsay

CARE FOR HANDS—Exquisitely shaped hands are a joy to behold. Make your hands an important beauty asset by daily care and exercises.

It is true that during the winter season our hands are more in evidence than during the play months. So they must be kept attractive by the usual weekly manicure and daily massage with lotion. Your nails may be as long and as oval as your duties will permit. But if you play the piano, do housework or typewrite you will find that too long nails are usually in the way. The main thing is to keep the nails nicely shaped, no matter what its length, and to keep it nicely polished either with lacquer or buffer.

If your fingers are not kept limber, your hand will appear to be clumsy and awkward. Sometimes avocations which require repeated finger action stiffen the hands. The constant use of only certain muscles is not good for the hand and if you find this is happening to you by all means practice finger exercises several times a week to give the neglected hand muscles a work-out. Here are a few which will bring grace of movement to your fingers if practiced regularly:

Exercise Routine
Take a polo ball or tennis ball. Hold it. The idea behind this exercise is that most people cannot coordinate the action of their fingers. They can make their index and second fingers move all but it is almost impossible to move the third and little fingers without lifting the fingers next to them. Try and see. Clasp the ball in your palm, fold the fingers over it and press firmly. Now try lifting first one finger and then the other while the rest of the fingers stay close to the ball. It can be done—but it requires practice! The results are worth it when the hand is gracefully supple!

Now pretend you are playing an imaginary tune on an imaginary piano. Bend the hands back from the wrist and poise them like a musician. Begin playing a tune. You might hum it to yourself as you play—that helps. If you haven't the least idea how to play a piano that need not deter you, simply pretend. The fingers move up and down and almost snap. This gives grace to the wrists.

The final exercise is one for a special hand condition that is no respecter of age—that is hand swelling. You do a species of jiggling for the swollen hands. Hold your arms with the elbows bent and the knuckles on a level with your shoulders—squirrel fashion. Then shake your hands vigorously back and forth—wiggling each finger separately and wiggling the whole hand. You may look a bit peculiar but no matter. You will find that the swelling subsides shortly after this exercise.

Sheer Guess Should be Last Resort

BY ELY CULBERTSON

There is no denying the fact that at times players are forced to rely upon nothing more than a sheer guess. But this should be a last resort, to be used only when all logical forms of investigation have failed. There is no excuse for guessing when a surer avenue to knowledge exists.

The bidding:
West Pass North Pass East Pass South Pass
2 diamonds Pass Pass Pass
Double Pass Pass Pass

The bidding is worthy of discussion. East, having opened third hand on very nearly minimum values and poor distribution, felt there was no future in the hand even after his partner's fairly strong response of two diamonds, and therefore exercised his discretion in passing. It is true that East-West could have made a game very easily, but that was due to the excellent lay of cards. South's bid, as may easily be seen, was based on a virtually nothing but "suspicion." He knew East to be given to psychic bidding and had a "hunch" that this particular time he had indulged; the pass to the two diamond bid was misread as testimony to that hunch. When South saw the dummy, he learned how wrong he was!

West opened the eight of spades. Dummy played low, as did East, and South won with the queen. The king and queen of clubs were cashed, after which declarer exited with a low diamond. West put up the eight and East overtook with the king in order to lead a trump. Declarer covered the ten of hearts with the queen.

Now, West made a bad guess. He jumped to the conclusion that South's bid could not possibly have been based on less than five trumps and that being so, that East had no more trumps to lead thru. Therefore, in order to prevent dummy from ruffing diamonds, West laid down the ace and the nine of trumps, the latter card being played to prevent dummy's seven from becoming an entry for the club ace. Obviously however, the lead of the nine of hearts from the 9-4 went into declarer's tenace of K-8 and saved him a trump trick.

There was no reason whatever for West to guess about the heart situation. There was a way for him to find out surely. All he had to do was to lead the deuce of spades. East would win, and if he had another heart would of course lead it; if not, he would play the spade ace and now West, on the knowledge that he could not expect another heart lead from partner, would ruff East's trick with the four spot and lead out the ace and nine. Since his actual method of play made the four of hearts worthless, this would have cost nothing. True, it would have meant only one more trick for the defenders, but these differences are reflected very decidedly in the match-point score.

When the cover of your glass garden becomes clouded with moisture, give it a little more ventilation.

There are three types of lamb chops: rib, loin and shoulder. Rib and loin are best known. Shoulder chops are popular with the thrifty housewife. English chops are of double thickness and are cut across undivided loin. Lamb "choplets" are from breast of lamb.

Case Records of a Psychologist

By Dr. George W. Crane
Psychologist, Northwestern University

Annette has posed a very pertinent question. I wish I had more space in which to present an adequate reply, but I shall confine myself to a few personal examples. If American freedom of speech is to be retained, the editors will be chiefly responsible. If it is abrogated, the radio will be to blame, for the radio is easily coerced and made into a Charley McCarthy for political strategists and military propagandists. Editors, however, are introverted enough to resist "cracking down" tactics.

CASE S-130: Annette L., aged 21, is a university senior. "Have you ever experienced any censorship of your writings?" she inquired after class one afternoon. "And do you think we have freedom of speech in this country nowadays?"

"Several of us have been talking about the guarantees of free speech in our American Constitution and have been wondering if they haven't been partially stifled. What has been your experience, Dr. Crane?"

DIAGNOSIS:
In the year 1938, I delivered the Lincoln Day memorial address in central Illinois. Many citizens apologized for being absent, though they had secretly bought tickets for the event.

They said they didn't dare show up for fear of reprisal regarding the government checks which they were receiving under the AAA. And their fears weren't imaginary!

About the same time, I joined with a number of others in opposition to the packing of our Supreme Court. One of my educational colleagues on that publicly announced committee, delivered a sterling address in opposition to curbing the checks and balances in our government as supposedly established by our Constitution to prevent dictatorship by the president.

A few days later two federal investigators descended upon him to see if they couldn't catch him up so to speak, with reference to his income tax returns. Being a scrupulously honest and loyal American, he had nothing to fear and they couldn't silence him by that device.

Radio Censorship
In 1940, my brother, who is professor of economics here at Northwestern, engaged in numerous public debates with other professors and British propagandists.

He presented a very sane and non-partisan analysis of German economics and publicly analyzed Hitler's regime. Because it was increasingly difficult to get anybody who would present the German side, he was called upon frequently.

But soon the pressure was applied to him. The radio stations began to delete as much as 75 per cent of his speeches, although he made no misstatements of facts and was only offering a scientific analysis of economic factors.

One of the radio censors explained that orders from the Atlantic coast forbade saying anything prejudicial to England, so they had to stifle freedom of speech in order to play ball with the propaganda campaign so ardently being engendered in the East.

Propagandizing America
Since I have long taught psychology courses dealing with advertising and propaganda, I certainly am quite conversant with the tricks and devices utilized to stampede a free nation into war hysteria.

The censorship of my brother was an excellent thing from the viewpoint of those who were ardently trying to set our frontier upon the Rhine.

From the angle of scientific impartiality and sane Americanism, typified in George Washington's Farewell Address, it was a violation of the basic rights vested in the people by our American Constitution.

As for my writings, I have encountered very little censorship. In fact, it is pretty hard for the government or paid propagandists to crack down on newspaper editors for they are much more resistant to pressure groups than are the three radio chains.

If liberty is to be retained in this nation, the editors will be the main body to thank. And if it is lost, the radio chains will be the ones to blame. I've had much experience with both. The radio is easily coerced!

Dr. Crane will give personal attention to questions on Psychology and problems. Write him, in care of the Appleton Post-Crescent, enclosing a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope and a dime to cover printing and typing costs. Letters and reader's names are never published.

The Road to Shani Lun

By Rita Mohler Hanson

YESTERDAY: Lynn Britton and Dick, her half-brother, have entered a forbidden temple in Mongolia so that Lynn may have a look at the man who tomorrow will escort her on a mysterious journey to visit a Mongol prince. Dick is ill at ease, and Lynn, her lovely figure disguised in men's clothes, has caught some of his fear.

Chapter Two
The Goddess Tara
Dick laughed. "You didn't care much for Sam Telford?"

"Sam made a dreadful fuss about my coming—threatened to follow me, to take up that old—that old bank scandal about you. He felt I shouldn't trust you because of it. But Dick," she put an affectionate hand on his, observing how old and thin and ill he looked, "to my little-girl memory you were a hero, somehow betrayed. You were so handsome, so kind, and so generous to me."

His thin grey lips twitched. "Then you don't think I'm such a bad fellow after all?"

"Life has been unkind to you. It would have been better to come home and take your medicine." He drew back and spoke brusquely. "That's not my way."

Something moved in a corner of the building. Dick drew his electric torch. The pilgrim was squatting on the stone-paved floor, his head hidden in his arms. Dick strode over and kicked him. The man merely cringed.

Seizing the dirty collar of his dull red coat, Dick drew the fellow to his feet, but he continued to hide his face like a frightened child. The white man laughed and shoved him back into his corner.

"Native jackal!" he said contemptuously.

"He's been watching and following us ever since we entered the gate," Lynn told her brother. "Perhaps you know him and he doesn't want you to see his face." Dick gave the fellow a final kick. "He's put a cowardly, begging pilgrim. I know the breed. It's the lamas you must be careful of. The pilgrims expect to be kicked around. Let's go. We should enter the temple before the monks gather for Sherdock's ceremonial visit."

Lynn followed him with an uneasy backward glance.

They crossed the terrace to another stairway leading up to the courtyard before the golden temple, with its yellow-tiled roof, the belled corners curving upward in rhythmic billowing grace.

Climbing the marble runway they crossed the portico, pushed open the door, and stepped inside the building. In the flicker of a thousand butter lamps, Lynn stopped and stared.

They revealed the images along the walls, a mammoth golden Buddha—a hideous devil—gods—rows of minor deities and lamas, disciples of the Buddha. With a feeling of awe she stepped forward and put her hand on one of the smooth red lacquer columns that disappeared into lofty voids of darkness above a cloud of painted silken banners. The devil-god inspired her with something of her childhood terror at a ferociously ugly face.

Shirtwaist Style

BY ANNE ADAMS

Here's smart two-timing style in Anne Adams' Pattern 4613! It will carry you right around the clock with first a trim shirtwaist for a busy working or shopping day; then a becoming housecoat for end-of-the-day relaxing. No side placket is needed, for there's a center-front fastening that may take the form of a buttoning or the popular fly-front effect—the latter closing with a concealed zipper or snaps. Aren't the revers well-cut? The bloused bodice lines, so softly flattering, are held smooth at the shoulders by all-around yokes. Choose between long or short sleeves, and don't forget to add a buttoned pocket for jaunty style. You can buckle or tie the optional belt—either way is smart.

Pattern 4613 is available in misses' and women's sizes, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 16 dresses take 4 yards 39 inch fabric.

room. A few gaunt pilgrims crept in and crouched along the wall. Then came a procession carrying big red lanterns, bundles of incense sticks and ritual pots hung with streamers of red and blue and yellow inscribed with mystic characters.

"Here's Sherdock, now," whispered Dick, as two lamas bearing lighted torches preceded the visiting "incarnation."

Sherdock Fuyeh was a small man clad in shining saffron robes, a high yellow mitre on his head and velvet Chinese boots on his feet. His wise, leathery old face with its grey chin-whiskers seemed as calm and peaceful as that of the Buddha. His serenity was so palpable that Lynn felt the contagion of it.

Certainly nothing but good could come from being in the presence of such a man, she thought, with a comforting sense of relief. He discounted the scores of new and unformed souls about him.

A throne-like chair was brought forward for him. His military escort, a half-dozen tall, handsomely uniformed men, wearing Sam Browne belts and cavalry boots, lined up under the image of the green Tara.

The torches lit up their smooth Mongolian faces and made Lynn extremely conscious of how much they resembled American Indians; how different they were from the small, yellow Chinese she had been accustomed to see in California. The leader moved slightly and Lynn secured a better look at his face.

"Dick," she whispered excitedly under cover of the chatter that filled the room, "I'll wager there's white blood in that man—that Mongolian officer."

"Very likely," he agreed without glancing up. "White travelers occasionally pass through the country."

Lynn shrugged and continued to watch the young officer. He had an appearance of lineage; an air of the unconquerable, the unpredictable about him. To her eyes he seemed far superior in carriage and pride and alertness to the rest of the soldiers. Even the scar on his left cheek, shaped like a horse's shoe and very noticeable, was not, somehow, unpleasant.

Lamentation
A golden bell-note stilled the chattering. Small drums struck up a special rhythm with all the gusto of a devil dance. Then deep-toned trumpets rumbled and were silent; wind instruments like oboes sang a musical phrase simple yet moving. It was repeated with variations supported by the thunder-roll of kettle drums. Lynn felt in the music a strange, acute impression of lamentation.

Slowly a chant arose, low and melancholy at first, then deep-throated as thunder in the mountains—solemn sentences of mystic import meant to raise the mind above captivating illusions. The chanting faded away; a rapid gesture symbolizing the void fluttered among the assemblage. Lynn had unconsciously raised her face until the light shone full

Statistics Against 'Teen-Age Marriages

BY DOROTHY DIX

Dear Miss Dix—Why are people so opposed to young marriages today? My great-grandmother and my grandmother both were married at 16 and lived long and happy lives with their husbands. I am a girl of 16, in love with a young man of 20, and we want to be married and set up housekeeping. I am a good cook and housekeeper and like to sew. We want to be married while we are young and spend the best part of our lives working and playing together. I know he will get to the top some day and I want to help him get there. What are our chances for a long and happy marriage? Sissy.

Answer:
I should say that they are about half what they would be if you waited until you are 23 or 24 to marry. Statistics show that teen-age marriages are about as brittle and easily broken as pie crust, and that the number of those that end in divorce are far, far greater than the marriages entered into by mature men and women. The reason older people oppose the marriage of adolescents is because calf love is the most fleeting emotion on earth. It is just a fancy that passes like a summer wind. Boys and girls are too young and undeveloped to be capable of wisely choosing a life mate, because they do not know what they are going to be themselves when they grow up, nor what qualities they are going to need in a husband or wife.

Struggles of Youth
Nor are they mentally or physically fit to assume the burdens and responsibilities of marriage. In all the world there is no sadder sight than a boy husband, broken and beaten in his futile efforts to support a family; unless it is a poor little girl wife, shabby and worn, with crying babies hanging to her skirts, already tired of the lad she married and envying every girl whose feet are dancing of a night while her walk the colic. Marriage is an adult game. It is not for children.

The fact that your great-grandmother and grandmother married at 16 and lived happily ever after has no bearing on your case. They lived in a different time when life was simple and when it did not take so much to make people happy as it does now.

In those days when a couple married they practically retired from the world and spent the balance of their lives in working and saving and rearing a family. They didn't expect to be amused or entertained or take vacations or go on trips, and they thought that they were having a hilarious time when they went to the church supper once a year.

Your grandmother cooked her own food, did the family laundry and sewing, and didn't spend as much on her clothes in a year as you spend at the beauty shop. As she had never heard of being style-conscious or belonging to clubs or playing bridge or going to cocktail parties, she never missed them.

But what used to be luxuries are now necessities, and there is no use in saying that you can go back and live the way your great-grandmother did and be happy, because you can't. It simply isn't in nature to do it.

Also, consider this point of view: Your young man has his fortune to make. He is ambitious and you are ambitious for him and want to help him. Can't you realize that the biggest help you can give him is not to burden him with your support while he is trying to get a start?

Let him get well on his feet before he gets married. Give him a chance to save up a little money before he handicaps himself with a family. With a wife and babies coming, and doctors' bills and hospital bills and a million other bills, it is mighty hard for a poor young chap to gather together the little nest egg that enables him to take advantage of his chance when opportunity knocks at his door.

So why not wait a few years until you are both grown up before you rush into the great adventure? Marriage lasts a long time and, as a cynic has said, "if you are not happily married it seems longer."

Children's Marriage
Dear Dorothy Dix—I am a young man of 26, physically fit and mentally mature. I am desirous of marriage, but I don't want to have children. Do you think I can find a girl who feels the same way as I do about children, and that we could be happy without them? JOHN.

Answer:
Oh, there are plenty of women who regard children as brats instead of bundles from heaven and would be glad enough to marry a man who is like-minded. So there is no need for you to remain a bachelor because you haven't a perambulator complex.

Nor would your not wanting children keep your marriage from being a success, provided that you get a wife who was allergic to kids as you are. The trouble comes in when the husband wants children and the wife doesn't, or the wife longs for babies and the husband won't have them on the premises.

Some of the happiest marriages in the world are childless. The husband and wife are both happy and contented.

upon it. She heard a swift intake of breath at her side. Dick was staring at the native officer.

"Temu Darin!" he gasped. But the soldier was not looking at Dick; his piercing amber eyes had struck fire from Lynn, his calm incredulity changing to the shock of intimate recognition as if she were known to him. Then swiftly his expression took on a flare of angry comprehension, for he had seen Dick.

A ragged pilgrim screamed, pointing a bony finger in Lynn's direction. It was the evil-looking Mongol of the missing ear. He shouted a native phrase that was thrown back and forth among the crowd. Excitement caught like panic in a herd of milling cattle. Demoniac tumult broke loose.

Dick struggled frantically to open the door behind them and succeeded just as the tall officer, knocking him right and left, reached their side. Strange words passed between him and Dick.

The door slammed and Lynn and her brother were on the outside and running. At the rate the lama guard recognized them, accepted more silently from Dick and rushed them up

A woman who reads our column has sent me a letter containing an interesting question.

"There is something," she writes, "which certain of my friends and myself would like to have you explain to us. Will you please tell how airplanes can travel at the same rate, as measured by points on the earth, while traveling east as while going west? Since the earth is supposed to be turning eastward at a terrific pace, a person would think places would be rushing away from a flyer all the time he traveled eastward, and would rush to meet him while he was flying westward."

As we start to answer that question, let us suppose we are aboard a moving train. You and I are the only persons in a coach, and we have a soft rubber ball.

From the forward end of the car, you toss the ball to me. I catch it and throw it back. Except perhaps for a little wobbling of the car, we find that the throwing is the same as if we were on the ground. Yet we know the train is moving ahead at a rate of about a mile a minute.

In the same way a person can play catch on an ocean liner. Time and again I have played deck tennis while crossing the Atlantic. Small rope rings were used instead of balls, but the idea was the same. In tossing the rings, I found no difference whether I was facing toward the bow or toward the stern of the ship.

The earth is twisting at a fast rate. At the equator it moves a thousand miles an hour. In the region of the Great Lakes, the speed is only half as great; you can see if you study a world map globe, and observe the shorter distance around the earth at a high latitude.

As the earth turns on its axis, it carries the air and the clouds along with it. Since the air has weight, the force of gravity works on it. If there were no weight to the air, it would pass into space, and there would be no oxygen left for us to breathe.

Birds and airplanes move along with the turning of the earth. They can hover over a certain point and still will be moving in the same way people and things on the surface of the earth move.

If it were not for that fact, a man could go up in a balloon and simply wait for the surface of the earth to rush by. At the proper time he could land his balloon in China.

Appleton Audience Hails Kirsten Flagstad as Opera Star Opens Artist Series

BY VIOLA HELLEMMANN

Kirsten Flagstad, prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera company, sang last night at Lawrence Memorial chapel and actually created something like fervor in a usually reserved Appleton audience. There was nothing perfunctory about the spontaneous applause that called her out for four encores and many bows.

Since Madame Flagstad attained her fame as a Wagnerian soprano, many had noted with disappointment that her program contained only two arias from Wagner operas, but after hearing the program they had to admit that the Grieg selections and the other little songs displayed the singer's magnificent voice as well if not better than the arias.

Grateful applause greeted Madame Flagstad's selection of familiar songs for encores. Among them were "A Dream," by Grieg, "When I Have Sung My Songs" and Oley Speaks' beautiful "Morning."

Chapel Jammed
The "Standing Room Only" sign which has to be set out whenever Kirsten Flagstad sings in Metropolitan Opera company productions in New York would have come in handy last night at the chapel. Not only the regular seats but scores of chairs which had been set up on the stage and in any little space where there was room were filled.

The arias with which the first lady of the opera opened her program were "Elsa's Traum," from "Lohengrin," and "Du bist der Lenz," from "Walkure."

Then came six songs in the singer's native Norwegian tongue. Two of them, "May Night" and "The Light From You," were by Sinding, a third, "The Moon-Boy's Story," was by Hannikainen and the remaining three, "A Boat Rocks To and Fro," "A Swan" and "Thanks for your Counsel," were by Grieg. Four songs in English made up the third part of the program. They were "Nocturne," by Michael Head, "Spendthrift," by Ernest Charles, "We Have Turned Again Home," by Edwin McArthur and "Love Went A-Riding," by Frank Bridge.

McArthur is Accompanist
The composer of one of these, Mr. McArthur, was Madame Flagstad's accompanist last night, and did an excellent job of it.

Three German songs by Strauss, "Allerseelen," "Du meines Herzens Kronlein," and "Ich Liebe Dich" comprised the fourth and last part of the program.

At intermission time Madame Flagstad, who wore a gown of regal purple for her Appleton appearance, received a bouquet of roses.

The concert was the first of the 1940-41 Community Artists series. The second will be given Dec. 10 by Erica Morini, violinist.

Whizzer White Expected to Win Ground Gaining Championship

Detroit, Mich.—Byron "Whizzer" White, spectacular mainstay of the Detroit Lions of the National Football league, is favored to win his second annual ground gaining championship in the pro circuit.

All-American Colorado back White entered the league in 1938 and was the only "freshman" that season to capture an individual title. Surpassing the feats of numerous famed ball carriers, the Whizzer gained 567 yards in 152 attempts. He also threw passes for 393 yards.

White was out of competition in 1939. Should the former Colorado flash repeat his ground gaining championship accomplishment this year he will be the first to corral the crown in consecutive playing seasons.

The Whizzer, despite his status as the Lions' chief offensive weapon, is definitely a team player. His blazing competitive spirit is masked behind a quick grin and quiet voice. But once the whistle blows, he asks no favor — gives none.

Teamates Like Him
His fellow Lions regard the Whizzer with a friendly kind of awe, not only for his gridiron talents, but also for his intellectual attainments and his pronounced co-operative nature. On the practice field no Lion hits the tackling dummy or runs plays with more fire than White. Nor does he shirk such menial tasks as lugging equipment on and off the field.

What the Lions like most about Whizzer is the calm and good-natured poise with which he reacts to good days and bad, although the bad ones are a rarity.

White probably is the hardest-working back in the National league and certainly one of the smartest athletes in the nation. As a Rhodes scholar, he is well-informed on international affairs and, if you corner him between gridiron workouts, he has some enlightening opinions to express. Moreover, his general knowledge on most subjects makes him a logical candidate for a guest shot on "Information, Please."

After finishing this season with the Lions, White will return to Yale law school, where he still has about three half-year terms to go before obtaining his law degree. After that—? "Well, I'll go anywhere I think I can get started on the right foot in the practice of law."

White, 23 years old, has no immediate ambition save to complete his law studies with the same flying academic colors that made him an honor student at Colorado and won him a Rhodes scholarship. As to marriage: "When you're jumping around the country the way I've been doing for three years, you don't have much time to form a permanent attachment."

"Get it yourself if you want it," the tired and battered halfback replied, "I had it long enough!"

For Second Victory

Wrightstown — Under the guidance of their new coach, Oscar Gable, Wrightstown cagers scored their second victory of the season in downing St. Mary's of Oshkosh by a 28 to 25 count at Oshkosh last evening. Wrightstown turned back Denmark last week.

Edinger sparked the attack last night with six buckets and a free throw for thirteen points. Wrightstown started fast with a 14 to 6 lead in the first quarter but St. Mary's whittled that margin and at the end of the third period Wrightstown held a thin 24 to 20 edge.

Davis Fouts Zivic So Often Bout Is Stopped; Cops Clear the Ring

BY GAYLE TALBOT

New York —(4)—Rowdy Al Davis of Brooklyn, who gave promise up to last night of being a boxing champion some time soon, is free today to shop around for another career.

He finished himself as a fighter, in this state at least, by his exhibition of fouling against welterweight champion Fritz Zivic in the Garden.

After Referee Billy Cavanagh had stopped it in the second round and helped the cops carry the kicking, snarling Davis back to his corner, the three members of the state athletic commission said indignantly, that "Bummy" was through for good in their bailiwick.

In addition, they held up Davis' end of the purse.

Davis threw about ten low blows into Zivic before Cavanagh stopped the fight. He had warned Davis twice earlier in the second round, and between the first and second, had wagged his finger at him.

Zivic was so angry when it ended that he rushed into Davis, and the pair fought like alley cats until police and Garden attendants separated them.

Examination afterward showed that Zivic was badly bruised and skinned up by the low punches. Davis was severely battered about the face from the beating he took in the first round.

It obviously was no match from the start. Zivic clouted Davis virtually at will. At that rate, the Brooklyn boy would have been in bad shape before the scheduled 10 rounds were up.

The blows he laid into Zivic once he got the range were full lefts that started near the floor and landed with a clang on the champ's protective gear. The angry crowd of 17,000 was yelling murder long before the referee acted, and some of them still were hanging around the dressing room an hour later in hopes of getting a punch at "Bummy."

Marquette Passer So Accurate
He Can Hit Receivers on Nose

Milwaukee—(4)—Marquette University's "little" Jimmy Richardson, currently leading the nation's footballers in total yards gained, passes so accurately that he pegged a 60-yard toss to end Don Vosberg and hit him on the nose.

Trapped behind the line in last week's Manhattan — Marquette scorers' nightmare which the Hill-toppers lost 45-41, the 163-pound left halfback spotted Vosberg and threw downfield. Vosberg was bumped off balance with the ball in flight and the pigskin smacked him on the nose as he fell to the ground.

In that same sensational game which jumped Jimmy from twelfth to first place in yards gained, he passed 40 yards to Fred Rice when

Elm Trees to Play in Home Talent League

Eddie Dancisak to Serve as Playing Manager for Quint

The Elm Tree Bakery basketball team will compete in the Valley home talent league and will have Eddie Dancisak as manager and player, it was announced today.

Dancisak managed the Appleton team of the Wisconsin State Basketball league last season and has been signed for next year. He has had considerable experience as a basketball player and official at Whiting, Ind., his home town.

Because of the home talent aspect of the loop, the Bakers will be composed entirely of Appleton players this year. Among the veterans expected to show are Mark Catlin, Ed Krause, Orville Wosner, Carlton Krick, Jack Sellers and Louis Grishaber, the latter fully recovered from an operation last year.

Bud Werner, former Appleton high griddier, is one of the new members of the squad. He compiled an enviable record in the Y.M.C.A. league last season and should be a big help.

The Bakers have been working out individually at the Y.M.C.A. but will start their first regular drills at 7:30 Monday evening under Dancisak's supervision.

Several practice games are being sought by the Bakers before the opening of the season late this month.

Waupaca High Five Begins Its Workouts

Waupaca — With their first season of football in 19 years over, Waupaca high school this week began turning its attention to basketball. Approximately 30 boys reported on Wednesday to Coach Eric Becker and his assistant, LeRoy Haberkorn.

The former was a high-scoring Oshkosh Teachers all-conference guard. Practice sessions and games are to be staged in the armory because of inadequate gym facilities at the high school.

Among the 30 candidates reporting there were six lettermen from last year's squad which won six games and lost nine. After about two or three days of fundamentals, Coach Becker is expected to cut his squad to around 20 men. The group will be divided into "A" and "B" squads. Intensive drills will be necessary inasmuch as the teams have only nine days before opening the season at Berlin on Nov. 26.

The schedule is as follows:
Nov. 26 — Berlin at Berlin; Nov. 29 — Kaukauna at Kaukauna; Dec. 6 — Amherst at Waupaca; Dec. 20 — Waupaca at Iola; Jan. 7 — Omro at Waupaca; Jan. 10 — Waupaca at Marion; Jan. 17 — Weyauwega at Waupaca; Jan. 24 — Manawa at Waupaca; Jan. 31 — Waupaca at Amherst; Feb. 4 — Waupaca at Omro; Feb. 7 — Iola at Waupaca; Feb. 14 — Marion at Waupaca; Feb. 21 — Waupaca at Weyauwega.

A meeting has been called at the clubhouse for managers next Wednesday evening when the player rosters will be submitted, the schedule approved and last minute details discussed before the opening day, Nov. 26.

With the Bakers in the league, rivalry will be keen, especially when they meet the Kimberly Papermakers. During the 1938-39 season, the Bakers took away the state amateur crown from Kimberly which they had attained a season before. The Papermakers were a state amateur crown for a second time this spring. John Whitney, an officer in the Kimberly Athletic association, will be the league statistician. He will draw up a score sheet for mailing purposes so that scores can be sent to him and will have the sheets ready for Wednesday's meeting.

The Papermakers are working out regularly on the clubhouse floor, preparing for the opening game. Tuesday evening they will scrimmage against a Neenah team on the club floor.

Tommy Harmon Ready to Romp Over Wildcats

Northwestern Versus Michigan Tops the Midwest Grid Card

Ann Arbor, Mich. (AP)—Sensational Tommy Harmon, braked down a week ago by rain, mud and Minnesota power, got his last chance of a brilliant career today to run up some touchdowns before the home folks.

Harmon and Michigan meet Northwestern's Wildcats before a promised crowd of 85,000, the victor to retain a slight hope for title honors. It was Michigan's last game at home of the season.

The battle, regarded as a toss-up, was the third and final in the Big Ten's fateful "round robin." Both Northwestern and Michigan lost by a point to Minnesota the last two Saturdays.

Minneapolis (AP)—This is the day Bernie Bierman finds out whether the inoculation he has given his Minnesota football team against an upset bugaboo "takes."

This, too, is the day Minnesota finds itself in a position possibly to win the Western conference football championship when it grapples with a tough Purdue eleven.

Unable to get his team out of doors all week, Bierman's makeshift practices were well interspersed with caustic comments on preparedness against a possible Purdue upset.

Snow, 15 inches of it, was shoveled out the Gopher stadium, and although the field itself did not freeze, the going may be heavy because of the heavy rain which soaked it prior to the blizzard.

For Minnesota it will be an attempt to score a seventh straight victory.

South Bend, Ind. (AP)—Notre Dame, at full strength for the first time in three weeks, bid for its seventh straight win of the season today against Iowa's underdog Hawkeyes, losers of their last four games.

The Irish were favored, but Iowa was rated a chance to match the upset win it scored a year ago over Notre Dame eleven which also had won its first six starts.

There were prospects of a capacity crowd of 56,000. The opening kickoff was scheduled for 1:30 p. m. (CST).

Hanover, N. H. (AP)—Dartmouth's football team, beaten by every major rival except Harvard this season, had to play the mighty Cornell squad today. According to all indications, Dartmouth could hope for nothing more than to hold down the score, but the records show that Dartmouth managed to do the unexpected four times in nine attempts since 1900 by spoiling a perfect record for its biggest rival—Cornell.

Cornell, perhaps the best team in the east, presented practically the same squad that beat Dartmouth 5-6 last year while the Indians appeared weaker than in 1939.

Champaign, Ill. (AP)—Illinois was prepared to use a wide open passing game today against the favored Ohio State Buckeyes at Memorial Stadium in the final home battle of the Illini season.

The promise of clear weather encourage Illini's aerial game, for firm footing would aid receivers in getting down under the passes of Dick Good. Ohio State entered the game with an advantage in reserve strength, weight and speed and its rushing game, built around Jim Langhurst and Don Scott, was expected to prove troublesome for the Illini forwards.

A crowd of some 30,000 was expected to be on hand for the opening kickoff at 1:30 p. m. (CST).

Pittsburgh (AP)—Inclement weather buoyed hopes of Pitt's followers today that the Panthers might surprise a favored Nebraska team in an intersectional grid clash.

Rain, mixed with snow, fell all day Friday and muddled the gridiron. A crowd of some 30,000 was expected.

Madison (AP)—Victorious in its last two western conference starts, Wisconsin faces a tough Indiana eleven here today.

An estimated 18,000 fans will be on hand for the 2 p. m. (CST) kickoff.

The Badgers defeated Purdue and Illinois after losing to Iowa and Northwestern. Indiana has dropped two of its three conference games. Both played outside the league last week, Indiana licking Michigan State and Wisconsin bowing 7-6 to Columbia.

Manhattan, Kas. (AP)—Fourth place in the Big Six standings was at stake in today's football battle between Iowa State and Kansas State.

It was band day and enough musicians were expected to boost the total attendance above 10,000.

Milwaukee (AP)—Still unable to figure out how they could score so many points this season and yet lose so many games, Marquette University's gridmen try again today — this time against Michigan State.

The Hilltoppers have piled up 141 points in six contests, but netted only one victory. That record made Michigan State the pre-game favorite in today's battle.

The kickoff was set for 2 p. m. (CST).

Pleasant weather, although the air still was somewhat chilly, prevailed several hours before the game. The annual Dads' day ceremony of introducing fathers of

Best 'Barometer' of U. S. Still 3-State Combination

BY DR. GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J. — As the nation's political experts scan the official election returns during the next few weeks, they will find that the three states, New York, Ohio and Maryland — when taken together — still provide the best "barometer" of national sentiment of any states in the Union.

President Roosevelt received an average of 54.4 per cent in these three states on election day. Roosevelt's national percentage was 54.7 — or only a fraction of a per cent more than the division in New York, Ohio and Maryland.

Just why New York, Ohio and Maryland should prove to be such an unflinching good index of the national political temper, year after year, is something which still provides a puzzle. The best available explanation is that New York reflects the industrial East, while Ohio and Maryland give balancing tinges of the Midwest and South respectively.

But, whatever the reasons for the astonishing value of these states as national indicators, political history shows that they have been — on the average — only 14 points away from the nation's vote over the past 16 presidential elections.

On Sept. 8, two months before the election, the American Institute of Public Opinion said: "If between 1884 and 1936 a political observer had known how these three states would go, he could have predicted the nation's vote with an average error of only 1.25 percentage points."

Interestingly enough, the 1940 election has seen other famous "barometer" areas go crashing down. Through the years, one of the best barometers of all has been Erie county, Ohio, a farming and industrial county of just over 40,000 population on the edge of Lake Erie, containing a relatively large number of voters of German origin.

In election after election since 1888 Erie county has invariably cast a majority for the winning presidential candidate, and it has averaged only 14 per cent off.

This year, however, Erie county went for Wendell Willkie. It cast only 45.1 per cent of its vote for President Roosevelt, for a deviation of 91 points from the national figure, the greatest deviation in its history.

Back of this sudden break in its barometer record, political observers see several factors including the effect of the war issue on Erie county's farmers and small businessmen. In this respect Erie county was far more representative of the Midwest farming states — several of which went to Willkie — than of the country as a whole.

Another barometer county which reversed a 50-year record was Allen county, Indiana, which centers about the city of Fort Wayne. Here, probably, the county's long record as a national indicator was upset by the fact that Wendell Willkie was a native son of Indiana.

Roosevelt, however, received only 42.1 per cent of the vote in Allen county, as against 54.7 for the whole country — or a deviation of 12 points, by far the greatest in its history.

One of the few barometer counties which kept its record reasonably clear was Sheridan county, Wyoming, which cast 53.7 per cent of its vote for President Roosevelt, only 1 point less than the national average.

Program Given By Students

'Open House' Held At Waupaca Schools For Education Week

Waupaca—The assembly room at the high school was filled Friday evening for the annual "open house" to parents and friends of students. Teachers greeted parents and discussed with them problems of their children. At 7:30 a program was presented in the auditorium, opening with several selections by the orchestra of fifteen pieces. The first was a march, "United Liberty" by Serey; Overture, "Poet and Peasant" by Suppe; LaPaloma by Yradier; selection from the "Mikado," Sullivan; and a march from "Tannhauser" by Wagner.

Under the direction of Miss Dorothy Roloff, the kindergarten rhythm band played three numbers. Glenn Brown, senior, gave a reading, "The Joke," which was followed by three numbers by the high school mixed chorus of 45 voices. They sang "Prayer for Hansel and Gretel" by Humperdinck; "Deep River," arranged by Burleigh; and "Onward Ye Peoples" by Sibelius. The fifth grade, instructed by Miss Isabel Hart, depicted a literary society meeting and program. The entire program closed with five selections by the high school band with its fifty members under the direction of Ernest Weber. The selections were "Field of Honor," march by Clennette; "Three Merry Knights," overture by Strauss; "Scotch Songs," a selection by Schumaker; "Trombone Toboggan," by Prof. Weber and "God Bless America," by Berlin.

New York (AP)—Nick Ardillo, an Italian and Vic Costello, a Greek, have played side by side in the Auburn line all season and neither has been penalized a yard for slugging. The new arrival in the home of "King Kong" Kahler, Nebraska tackle, has been dubbed "Ping Pong." Frank Leahy definitely will be back at Boston college next year despite efforts to lure him away. Arrivals: Pinkie George and Heavyweight Lee Savold from Des Moines.

The Louisiana Way

Wisconsin players will be held at halftime.

Although Coach Harry Stuhldreher for a time yesterday considered starting the ailing veteran Dick Embick at right guard, he later said he probably would stand on an earlier decision to start John Roberts, a sophomore. Other sophomores listed as probable starters for Wisconsin were Dave Schreiner and Pat Lyons, ends, and Dick Thornally and Lloyd Wasserbach, tackles.

Pegler Examines Some of the Associates of Judge Padway

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York—Anyone who is interested in the attempt to purify the American Federation of Labor in the impending national convention in New Orleans may appreciate some background information on Judge Joseph A. Padway, general counsel of the national organization. Judge Padway is the highest legal authority in the federation and a veteran operator who served a spell as judge of the civil court in Milwaukee, served many years as counsel of the Wisconsin Federation of Labor and became general counsel of the A. F. of L. in 1938.

Judge Padway's heart is in the labor movement, to be sure, but he is not an amateur lawyer. His zeal for labor has paid him well. He is now general counsel for seven international or national unions within the federation and special or occasional counsel for others. His clients at this time include the stagehands and movie employees' union, under the presidency of George Browne, the Chicago gangster, and he once got $1,000 for doing a job for the building service employees' union, whose recent president, George Scalise, the old-time white-slaver, is under sentence to a long term in prison for robbing the union membership.

Judge Padway revised the constitution of the A. F. of L. Indorsed Scalise's application for a presidential pardon at a time when Scalise was openly associating with Little Augie Carfano of New York, Charlie Fischetti of Chicago, a gunman like Carfano, and cousin of Al Capone, and Frank Nitti of the Miami criminal scum. But, of course, Judge Padway had no idea that Scalise was still a gangster. The judge likes to think the best of his fellow men.

Another of Judge Padway's clients, as general counsel, is the bartenders' union, which, in Chicago and Miami, is a notorious racket of the lowest type of criminals, although he couldn't be expected to know that, being merely the union's lawyer.

But it is difficult to understand how even the kindest of men could have failed to suspect gangster Browne's union as recently as last June, when Judge Padway attended the annual convention in Louisville and uttered some remarks which I shall quote briefly. At this time it had been shown that Browne was a gang man who rose to office following the assassination of Tommy Malloy, another gangster, and that two of Browne's personal ambassadors plenipotentiary were criminals and active crooks. One of these, Wilkie

Bioff, at the very time that Judge Padway addressed the convention, was serving six months for managing a bevy of harlots, and yet Judge Padway, before the convention of the racket, spoke of his association with "Mr. Bioff."

That Report Wept For "Brother" Bioff

"Yesterday," said Judge Padway, "I had the opportunity of listening to a very splendid report on the activities of this international covering the past six years."

That was telling them, but you ought to read that report of gangster Browne. It weeps for "brother" Bioff, his personal agent who not only had a record as a brothel keeper and Capone hoodlum but, in California, as representative of Judge Padway's client, accepted $100,000 from an employer with whom he was having negotiations on behalf of the union, plus tickets for himself and one for a de luxe cruise to South America on the Normandie—cost $3,600. The report of gangster Browne extolled and defended this foul criminal, and yet Judge Padway called it "a very splendid report."

Judge Padway also reported that he had worked with Browne "on the St. Louis situation" and said "your report indicates that that was settled satisfactorily by him." The fact is that in "the St. Louis situation" another criminal named John C. A. Bauerfeind entertained the Neighborhood Five hundred club Tuesday evening.

Employers Insurance Head Observes Subway Building

Kenneth J. Benson, local manager for the Employers Mutual Liability Company, Wausau, Wisconsin, recently spent a day in Chicago where he visited some of the Subway construction operations.

Explaining that the Employers Mutual policies cover about 65 per cent of the Chicago Subway contracts, Benson reports that he was fortunate enough to be taken through the operations by Safety Engineer Otto Holmskog.

"The part played by the insurance company extending workmen's compensation for the employees on a gigantic project like this is an important one," Benson says. "The safety engineering program alone is interesting."

"When we wrote policies to cover operations of many of the contractors who had been awarded work on the Subway, we organized special services and brought every effort to bear on the prevention of accidents and the alleviation of their effects, once they occurred. Safety engineering service was already well organized from our Chicago office, but additional facilities had to be provided for the tunnel work."

"As soon as one of our policyholders would be awarded a contract for a portion of the subway or perhaps a subway station our safety engineers who are specialists in tunnel work would go into consultation with engineers of the construction company and a uniform safety code would be arrived at with the company and our safety men drawing up a set of regulations which had to be carried out to insure safety."

"Work in tunnels must be carried on under compressed air to keep loose material and moisture from falling. Although the pressures to be maintained in the tunnels were not the highest, the average being about 15 pounds, working at these pressures made a set of problems that must be dealt with."

Safe Practices Established
"In extending Workmen's Compensation insurance, first of all, safe practices for tunnel construction had to be established. This had to do with the proper compression locks for the entry and exit of those entering tunnel where pressure was maintained, erection of safety and warning signs, construction of emergency exits, installation of guards for machinery, formulation of safety rules for employee conduct while on the job.

"A standing assignment was one of education. Only a few of the employees were experienced tunnel workers and safe practices had to be instilled at safety meetings, at which both semi-technical material was presented and also the more familiar inspirational material appealing to the worker's pride and sense of security to avoid accidents. Special education for rescue work was organized also, the men learning how to care for the injured and those who may have been overcome with compressed air ailments, suffocation, electric shock, etc., including lessons in artificial respiration and the use of oxygen masks."

"Another standing assignment for insurance company safety men, of course, is periodical inspections of the property, equipment, and methods of the insured. Insurance company safety workers can observe more than the contractors themselves, who welcome the inspections even though they may result in safety recommendations that cost money. The insurance company safety engineers go into the tunnels and cover all the operations, going through the entire location from stem to stern, and expose themselves to the same hazards as the workers are exposed to."

Physician Service
"For a project of this magnitude, it was necessary to have a medical and first aid program. Before any men were allowed to work under pressure it was necessary that they submit to a physical and medical examination and be found in good condition. The services of a full time doctor were arranged for by our company, and this doctor was located in a building leased by the insured at the head of one of the main shafts. This doctor was available for services to the sick or injured employees at all times. Assisting the doctor in charge were a crew of first aid workers stationed at first aid rooms above the various shaftways and these men were at hand every minute of the time, night and day, to give immediate attention to injured or ill workers."

"The problems of safety engineering had to do not only with accidents and injuries on the job, but with the occupational disease situation as well. Tunnel work under pressure carries with it a susceptibility to diseases of the ear. Men suffering from colds were particularly subject to ear trouble after working under pressure. It was necessary to forbid men who had colds from going to work. Men with sore throats and colds were treated at the location and not permitted to go into the compressor unless all signs of congestion and infection had disappeared."

"The differences in temperature between the tunnel itself and the outside was considerable, that in the tunnel being quite high, but this threat to the health of the men was largely eliminated by providing showers in the 'hog house' at each job location. Locker facilities made it possible for each man to emerge into the street, quelling his shift clean and with clean clothing. "Because the peril of fire is so greatly augmented in an enclosure containing air under greater than normal pressure, it was necessary to take extreme precautions. Fire curtains were placed around danger points, locations were liberally provided with fire barrels, buckets, and extinguishers, and at least two men at each location were fire wardens, having been especially instructed in fire prevention, fire fighting and the use of rescue devices."

"It will be seen that insuring the contractors engaged in this project entails a great amount of safety work, which means organization, the time and attention of experts, and proper facilities. The expense of a safety engineering program of this kind, however, is justified. Accidents and occupational diseases cost a great deal of money and spell loss to the contractors, and certainly to the afflicted worker, and indirectly, of course, to society."

La Villa Candy Is Holiday Favorite

Delicious Turkey Dinners Served Every Saturday

For a gift, or just to have handy when the Thanksgiving guests arrive, it's a well known fact that it would be difficult to beat the delicious goodness of La Villa Restaurant and Candy Shop's choicest treats. They're made from the very best ingredients and are famous for their freshness and purity.

Hard centers, creams, bon bons, nuts—La Villa has them all put up in special holiday boxes which are everyone's favorite. It's a good idea to bring home a box tonight, La Villa suggests and surprise the family. They are sure to be pleased—and they should be, because they're made in spotlessly clean kitchens and have an unusually fine taste appeal.

This Thanksgiving, families will be wise to take their big meal out for a change instead of going to all the wearing trouble of eating at home which often is a bit too requiring for the mother of the family. It's the one way to completely enjoy the holiday, La Villa believes, without sacrificing any of the extra goodness of a Thanksgiving meal. The La Villa Restaurant will be prepared as usual to serve its guests a Thanksgiving meal which will long be remembered after the holiday is past as a most enjoyable and excellent meal in keeping with the high standard of La Villa quality.

Incidentally, the La Villa is still serving its famous turkey dinners every Saturday for only 35c along with the choice of other tempting items on the menu.

TOYLAND OPENS AT SEARS' STORE—Sears' basement floor has taken on its annual "Alice in Wonderland" appearance with counters and floor space stacked high with Santos newest and latest toys for Christmas. Shown here is a portion of the beautiful, huge doll display, regularly one of the largest and finest in this vicinity. Many new mechanical toys patterned after the newest defense war machinery in both rubber and metal material is a special feature of this year's toy selection. Coastal defense fort sets, shooting battleships, anti-aircraft guns, G' mens Sparkling guns and Sparkling army bombers are included in the wide assortment. The new rubber toys are expected to be particularly popular because of their extra durability. A goodly number of new games are offered which are guaranteed to be sufficiently fascinating to capture the interest of both young and grown-ups alike and will help to pass many an hour pleasantly for the entire family during the indoor months ahead. In addition, the new junior models of Sears famous Goldspot refrigerator and Prosperity stoves, complete with all necessary utensils, are included among the many new items. Sears' huge Lionel and Marx electric train display has been set-up and is in full operation for the delight of young shoppers. A special invitation is extended by the Sears' management to parents to bring the children to Sears', America's favorite toy store, at their first opportunity to see the scores of new things offered this year.

Accordion Prices Lowest in History at Beinard Store

The Beinard Music store, 304 N. Appleton street, are at the present time featuring an unusually good stock of used pianos and "button style" accordions at prices never before heard of in this vicinity.

Proof of this statement is found in the fact that a 120 Bass Piano style accordion, complete with case, may be had at the Beinard store for as low as $59.50.

The stores new stock consists of the latest models in Soprano, Incidental, and the Hohner line. Incidentally, these instruments were ordered before the recent rise in prices which was brought about by the European wars. This makes it possible for Beinard's to guarantee every instrument to be a "bonafide" bargain. It's practically impossible to compare prices of these instruments with others on the market because of their extremely low range, it is pointed out. For example, a brand new genuine Hohner 48 Bass is priced at Beinard's for only $89.50.

Parents interested in giving their children a "music present" this Christmas are advised that now is a particularly advantageous time to buy before conditions force a price raise. When present stocks are depleted a raise in prices is certain the firm believes, and this fact holds for similar music stocks throughout the country.

Private lessons on these instruments may be arranged to be taken at the store or given at the students home. There is no money down required and no red tape or signing of contracts involved for these lessons. A capable teaching staff is retained by Beinard's and courses in all types of modern and old time music are offered. Rates are reasonable and within the range of practically any family budget.

Reflecting the strong current market and presaging an all-time high fourth quarter for this manufacturer, deliveries were effected in steady volume throughout the month. During the first 10-day period a total of 10,419 new Buicks were sold, followed by 10,319 in the second 10 days and 12,735 in the final October period.

At the same time, new orders during the month exceeded actual deliveries, totalling 33,557, Mr. Hufstader said. It was announced that production is running at a high rate to meet the heavy retail requirements and maintain prompt deliveries. Used car sales by Buick dealers showed a 44.1 per cent increase over last year with 47,711 sales against 33,117 in the corresponding 1939 period. This placed stocks of used cars in dealers hands on the basis of less than 28 days supply.

The authorized sales and service distributors for Buick in Appleton is the O. R. Kloehe company, 210 N. Morrison street.

DIM LIGHTS FOR SAFETY

HYDRAULIC WINDOW LIFT ON PACKARD—Diagram of installation Packard Automatic Hydraulic window lift offered as standard equipment on sedan models of the 1941 Custom Packard One-Eighty. The device provides power operation of all windows and the division partition on limousines. A reversible starter motor (figure 1) is located under the front seat and in turn is connected to a fluid pump. A solenoid operated valve (figure 2) is fitted in the line to each window and controlled by double acting switches (figure 5) in the front and rear compartments. Each of the windows (figure 3) is fitted with a hydraulic cylinder which raises or lowers the windows at the touch of a switch. Figure 4 shows the fluid reservoir connected to pump openings to hold fluid withdrawn from cylinders when window is in lowered position. Inset at bottom are diagrams showing location of operating switches in front and rear compartments of car.
